President chews on reporters

Denies arms control agency shakeup left him out of control

By JOHN MACLEAN
Chicago Tribune

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, stung by media reports of disarray at the White House, held a midday press conference Friday. He said he was ready and determined to bargain successfully on arms control with the Soviet Union.

Reagan blamed the press for creating an impression of administration "chaos" over arms control and other issues. Reagan called arms control "the most important problem facing this generation," and said the groundwork has been laid for substantial progress.

He dismissed his firing of Eugene Rostow this week as head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency as simply a move to "streamline the team."

"Recently I've made a few management changes so we can have a streamlined team in place," he said in a prepared statement before taking reporters questions.

Reagan said America's Western European allies should not be misled by press reports into thinking the United States lack the determination or ability to conduct arms control negotiations.

West European newspapers have viewed Rostow's firing with dismay, as indicating both a tougher line in arms control policy and confusion in Washington.

Reagan told the reporters, "Before you unravelled into complete disorder, maybe we should straighten out the entire subject."

He said his administration was well along with plans to modernize each leg of America's nuclear triad -- its land- and sea-based missiles and nuclear-capable bombers. He said the Soviet Union responds only to this sort of leverage, not to unilateral disarmament.

When he came to office, he said, "they had all the marbles." But now, he said, the United States is "in a position to get somewhere, and I'm determined we shall."

"Let there be no doubt, we're ready," Reagan said. "We will stay at the table as long as there is any chance at all of achieving arms reductions."

Reagan would give no time limit. He said, however, he plans to meet next week with the two U.S. negotiators who will return to talks in Geneva next month.

They are Edward Rowny, chief negotiator for the strategic arms reductions talks, and Paul Nitze, chief negotiator for the intermediate nuclear force talks.

Asked if he was preparing to modify his zero option plan this spring as has been reported, Reagan declined to discuss strategy.

The zero option plan envisions Soviet withdrawal of SS-20 missiles in return for NATO's cancellation of deployment of 572 U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles.

The Soviets have offered to draw down some SS-20s in return for the nondeployment.

Judge says WPPSS can't collect bills

By The Times-News
and United Press International

SEATTLE -- Northwest utilities that owned a share of two abandoned nuclear-power plants should start paying off their multi-billion dollar debt on Jan. 25, but the Washington Public Power Supply System can't force them to pay, a Seattle judge ruled this week.

Locally, that's good news to the city of Heyburn and other Idaho participants, says Steven Tuft, the Heyburn city attorney.

Heyburn, Rupert, Burley, Idaho Falls and Bonners Ferry are among the Idaho entities involved in the Seattle lawsuit. The litigation resulted from the termination or "mothballing" of the plants because of financing problems.

The Chemical Bank of New York, a trustee for the investors who bought the bonds sold to finance the plants, filed suit against the 88 participants in the project. The bank is seeking repayment of the bonds. With interest, the debt could reach $7 billion over 30 years.

On Thursday, Judge H. Joseph Coleman upheld the Jan. 25 date for the 88 participants to begin paying the obligation. However, the judge said he will sign a temporary restraining order, preventing WPPSS from taking any default action against non-paying utilities.

Stimson Bullitt, from the Seattle law firm that is representing Heyburn, Burley, Rupert and other utilities in the WPPSS suit, would not comment Friday on Coleman's ruling because the judge had not signed the order yet.

Coleman's order will remain in effect until the WPPSS board of directors and the utilities resolve their differences over settling a budget for terminating the two plants. An outside arbitrator will work with the two parties.

Coleman ruled that the system could send bills to the utilities, based on the budget adopted by the WPPSS board.

In addition to the lawsuit over the repayment of the bondholders, the participants are fighting a second battle with WPPSS over the budget, Tuft says.

In the original budget, the city of Heyburn's share would have been about $61,000 a month, Tuft says. In a later budget, the city's bill from WPPSS amounted to $43,302 per month.

A committee representing the participants rejected the system's budget for the third time this week.

Most of the Idaho participants have raised their electrical rates and set aside the funds raised from the rate increases in case the court rules they are obligated to begin paying WPPSS bondholders.

Thursday, the Washington Supreme Court approved a motion to delay the Chemical Bank trial, which was set to begin the same day. The delay was requested by the participants to give them more time to prepare for the trial.

The court set no new date for the trial, although it is expected to be rescheduled for March or April.

Tuft says the trial delay means the participants will "get a little breathing room" to prepare their tactics.

State's schools may fall $10 million short

Idaho Legislature

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE — The state could be $5 million to $10 million short on its February quarterly payment to public schools, state officials speculated Friday.

The news heightened the concern over Idaho's faltering cash flow.

"We don't know if that's the case yet, but it is a possibility," said Jerry Evans, the state superintendent of public instruction.

"Right now, our figures aren't solid enough to say for sure the cash-flow problem will be that bad," he said. "If it is, I'll have no choice but to change the allocation."

Gov. John Evans met Friday with the superintendent, state Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon and state Auditor Joe Williams to project whether the state would receive enough revenues to meet the $49 million school payment in February.

No conclusion was reached, however, and the discussion will continue into next week, a governor's spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Jerry Evans says that if the state cannot meet all of the scheduled February payment, the shortage would be added to the May payment — already scheduled to be $22.6 million.

Partly because of this dilemma, Democratic leaders took a first, wobbly step toward reducing the amount of money that already has been appropriated for the state's public schools for fiscal year 1983, which ends in June.

Senate minority leaders put together a proposal Friday that would withhold part of the February payment as a way of coping with the state's revenue shortage.

During a morning meeting, the group discussed the plan with Gov. Evans, but no consensus was reached. Evans repeatedly has said that he would refuse to reduce public school funding. Reportedly, he has mixed feelings about his fellow Democrats' proposal.

"We did not make a specific recommendation to the governor," said Senate Minority Leader Kermit Kiebert, D-Hope. "We're just exchanging information at this time.

"Frankly, I think there are going to be a lot of dead ends out there as we search for ways to correct our revenue shortage problem," Kiebert said. "This holdback proposal could be one of them, but it at least should be considered a possibility."

The minority leaders' plan would not tamper with the dollar amount of the education appropriation. Instead, it simply would throw the school payments off schedule.

Wholesale prices record smallest increase since 1971

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices rose just 0.1 percent in December to bring 1982's business inflation rate to 3.5 percent, its lowest since President Nixon's 1971 wage-price freeze, the Labor Department said Friday.

At the same time, the Federal Reserve Board reported that the nation's factory production, down 12.5 percent since the recession began, dropped a slight 0.1 percent in December — an encouraging sign the damage to industry may be leveling off.

American factories produced only as much in 1982 as they did in 1977, the Fed's economists said.

The latest economic news was called encouraging by the White House, where pending 1984 budget and 1983 deficit forecast decisions depend on how soon recovery can be expected.

"It indicates we continue to make substantial progress in attacking the underlying rate of inflation," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said. "It's good news for the economy."

A spokesman for manufacturers, who have been forced to do without substantial price increases, was less enthusiastic.

"The decline in prices has become too much of a good thing," said economist Jerry Jasinowski of the National Association of Manufacturers. "Weak demand and falling prices are seriously eroding profits, which in real terms are lower today than in 1965."

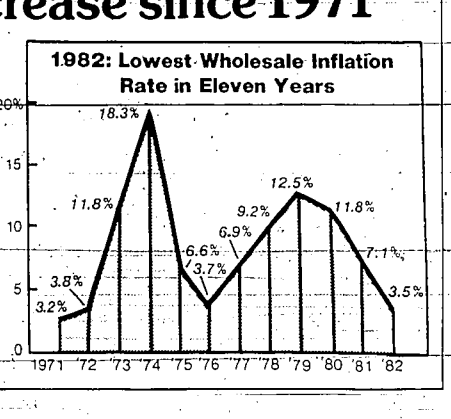
The 3.5 percent increase in the government's Producer Price Index from December 1981 was the smallest since 1971's 3.2 percent when it was held down in part by President Nixon's imposition of wage, price and rent controls to curb inflation in August of that year.

The Producer Price Index had climbed 7.1 percent in 1981. Trends that it reveals in wholesale prices tend to hold true when the same products are sold retail and are measured, along with many services, in the Consumer Price Index. When the Consumer Price Index is released in a week, it is expected show 1982's consumer inflation rate at only about 5 percent.

The figures showed a stable world oil price contributed the most to keep overall price increases small, climbing only 0.1 percent in 1982 at wholesale compared to 14.1 percent in 1981. Gasoline prices alone were down 8.6 percent last year for dealers.

"Energy prices have dictated most of the swings through the year," economist Donald Ratajczak said. A director of a price forecasting project at Georgia State University, Ratajczak predicts this year's business inflation rate will be higher than last year's, but not by much.

Food price increases during 1982 also were far less than most leading analysts had earlier expected, going up only 2.1 percent for the year and a scant 0.1 percent in December.



Late news

Truck-train wreck kills teen

RIGBY (UPI) — One teenager was killed and another critically injured Friday when a freight train slammed into their pickup truck, Jefferson County authorities said.

Killed instantly at 1:33 p.m. was Thomas Jeffery Nordstrom, 14, Rigby, sheriff's deputies said.

They said Nordstrom was a passenger in the truck driven by Robert Lee Dinsdale, 14, Rigby. Officials at Riverview Hospital in Idaho Falls said Dinsdale was in critical condition in the intensive care unit late Friday with chest injuries.

Deputies said the accident occurred about a mile south of Rigby at the Muir-Menan Union Pacific Railroad crossing on Holbrook Road near Old Highway 191.

They said the northbound train crashed into the truck and shoved it 254 feet down the tracks before the truck disengaged.

Ex-Marine commandant dies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. David Shoup, a former Marine Corps commandant, a poet, and an early critic of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, died this week, an official said Friday. He was 78.

Shoup, a tough and controversial leader who won the Medal of Honor in the Pacific during World War II, died just after midnight Thursday morning in the Circle Terrace Hospital in suburban Alexandria, Va., a hospital official said.

Shoup was wounded by shrapnel in November 1943 as he led U.S. Marines on the first day of the costly invasion of Tarawa, a Pacific island held by the Japanese, in which 948 Marines died and 2,072 were wounded.

He won the Medal of Honor for continuing the three-day assault despite his injuries.

Potential witness found dead

SENECA, S.C. (UPI) — A woman found dead Friday was identified as Helena Stoeckley Davis, whom a doctor claimed could have cleared him of murder charges in the 1970 slayings of his wife and two young daughters.

Seneca detective Andy Brock said the decomposed body was discovered about 12:45 p.m. by a maintenance man at the Seneca Garden Apartments and will be taken to the Medical University of South Carolina Saturday for an autopsy.

Brock said 7-month-old Donald Davis, apparently the woman's son, also was found in the apartment suffering from what officials called severe dehydration.

Mrs. Davis, about 32, was to have been a key witness in the 1979 murder trial of former Green Beret Dr. Jeffrey R. MacDonald but her testimony was not admitted because federal Judge Franklin T. Dupree said her past history of heavy drug use made her an incompetent witness.

'60 Minutes' segment blocked

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal judge Friday prohibited CBS-TV from showing a portion of this Sunday's "60 Minutes" show dealing with the mysterious 1980 slaying of policeman Gregory Neupert and the subsequent deaths of four blacks.

Attorneys for seven policemen charged with numerous civil rights violations as a result of that investigation had asked U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier to ban the showing of the segment in the Dallas area, where a trial on the case is scheduled to begin in February.

Duplantier granted that request and extended the order to the entire nation, forbidding CBS "in any manner whatsoever" from broadcasting the controversial segment.

CBS News spokeswoman Geraldine Sharpe-Newton said the network's lawyers will appeal the decision to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Saturday.

School bus strikes train

BELGRADE, N.C. (UPI) — Thirty-two students were injured Friday when the brakes on a school bus failed and it collided with a freight train.

At least 55 children were on the bus, authorities said. There were no fatalities.

A spokesman for Onslow County Memorial Hospital said seven of the 32 injured students from Tabernacle Elementary School in Belgrade were admitted. The student bus driver was treated and released.

The bus driver told authorities the vehicle's brakes failed as it approached the crossing. The bus was dragged about 100 yards down the tracks.

Inventor loses patent rights

CHICAGO (UPI) — The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Friday overturned an $8 million award to an inventor for patent infringement by Sears, Roebuck and Co., saying his "quick release" socket wrench "would have been made anyway."

The appellate court said the inventor, Peter Roberts, 37, of Red Bank, Tenn., was not entitled to a patent for his device. Roberts invented the "quick release" wrench in 1963 while an 18-year-old Sears clerk in Gardner, Mass.

A federal jury awarded $8 million to Roberts in a patent infringement trial ending in March 1982. Jurors said Roberts had a valid patent and Sears had infringed on it since Jan. 20, 1977.

A three-judge appellate panel ruled unanimously against Roberts.

Roberts' device, the judges said, "was entitled to patent protection only if it was the kind of contribution unlikely to be induced except by promise of a monopoly and we do not think it was that kind of invention, because we think it would have been made anyway and soon."

Soviet grain purchases go up?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Friday increased its estimate of Soviet wheat purchases in the current marketing year to 36 million metric tons, up 1 million tons from past estimates because of a surge in Soviet buying.

"As of early January, the Soviets appear to have purchased or have commitments for over 25 million tons of their projected grain imports," the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

Since October, Moscow has bought just over 6 million tons of wheat and corn from the United States. Under an agreement between the two nations, the Soviets are required to make a minimum purchase of at least 6 million tons of U.S. grain in the year ending Sept. 30.

The new overall estimate of Soviet grain imports includes 19 million tons of wheat imports, up 2 million tons from last month's projection.

FBI negotiates to find Banks

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — The FBI opened negotiations Friday with leaders at the Onondaga Indian reservation to try to convince fugitive Indian leader Dennis Banks into surrendering and returning to South Dakota to face charges in a 1975 riot.

Banks' lawyer, William Kunstler, meanwhile, said he was working to prevent authorities from extraditing Banks to South Dakota, saying Banks would be killed if he returned to the state.

Banks is the founder of the militant American Indian Movement which staged a 70-day occupation of Wounded Knee, S.D. in 1973 to press demands that Indians be compensated for government lands.

Banks, 52, faces 15 years in prison for a 1975 riot and assault conviction stemming from a disruption at the Custer County Courthouse in South Dakota.

Banks had taken refuge from that conviction in California, where former Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. had refused to permit Banks' extradition. He fled when Brown's term expired this year.

Wife of cult leader tried to have him sent to asylum

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A day before "black Jesus" Lindberg Sanders and his six disciples took a policeman hostage and beat him to death, Sanders' wife tried to get him committed to a mental institution, a judge said Friday.

Sanders, 49, and his six followers were killed when police stormed his barricaded house Wednesday to try to rescue Officer Robert S. Hester — only to find him dead.

An autopsy indicated that Hester was beaten to death and died hours before the police attack.

Probate Court Judge Jospeh Evans said Friday that Sanders' wife, Dorothy, called the court offices Monday and told a clerk she needed help "right away." He said Mrs. Sanders first told a court clerk that, "He and three other people are living in a house and waiting for the world to come to an end."

Evans said Mrs. Sanders was informed the process to have her husband committed would take several days.

"She said 'that won't do, that won't do,'" Evans said. The judge said the clerk told the caller to contact police, but Mrs. Sanders said the police wouldn't do anything unless they saw her husband actually hurting himself or someone else.

The group believed a lunar eclipse last month foreshadowed the end of the world, a family member said.

"They believed the moon was coming down and everybody who'd been drinking clear water, eating pork, and breaking the laws of the Old Testament were going to get burned up," said William Harris, grandfather of one of the seven.

Harris said Sanders apparently convinced his followers when the world did not end following the Dec. 30 lunar eclipse, that the anti-Christ would come in the form of police.

"They probably didn't think they had anything to lose," Harris said.

The seven were killed Thursday when a SWAT team stormed a house where they had held policeman Robert Hester hostage for 30 hours. The officer had been beaten to death with his hands handcuffed behind him.

Rank-and-file policemen initially criticized superiors for not storming the house sooner, but a police union leader later said the cult members were intent on a fight to the death and "nobody could have come out of there alive."

Ray Maples, president of the Memphis Police Association, withdrew his earlier criticism of Police Director John Holt's handling of the situation.

"They (the fanatics) were all prepared to die," Maples said. "The only thing they were wanting to do was kill the police officer and as many other officers as they could.

"As long as he was alive, they tried to negotiate to get him out. We all realize now that was a mistake, but with the information that Holt had on the scene, at that time, it was really the only decision to make."

forcing some districts to issue tax-anticipation notes, to borrow operating capital until the rest of the appropriation is distributed.

The theory behind the plan is to prepare the school districts for a situation where the Legislature fails to balance the 1983 budget, thereby stopping payments to schools until additional property taxes can be raised to make up the difference.

A constitutional provision requires counties to levy more property taxes, if there is a state shortage, to ensure that all of the money budgeted for schools is paid.

But even if that safety mechanism is triggered, school districts will have to issue tax-anticipation notes to pay existing bills until the new tax dollars are collected next year.

Kiebert said that withholding part of the February payment would help ease school districts into the shortage situation, rather than dropping them into it abruptly when the fiscal year ends, June 30.

"It's easier to hold out a little now than to give out too much and have to take part of it back later," Kiebert said.

"The question we're facing is, 'What do you do when you run out of money?' Maybe we should consider holding back some of the school fund for other state uses, since it is by far the biggest part of the state budget."

The education appropriation, including colleges and vocational programs, accounts for about 75 percent of Idaho's general-fund budget.

Three scheduled payments to public schools remain before the fiscal year ends — $49 million in February, $22.6 million in May and $5.7 million in June.

But any type of holdback to schools — whether it's permanent or just temporary — will upset the budgeting commitments of most school districts, says Twin Falls District Superintendent James Sawin.

"I don't know what exact impact this might have on our district," he said Friday afternoon. "I can't comment on that until I see the dollar amount they would be sending us.

"But when they tell you this is how much money you can count on, and you budget for it, you have problems when it doesn't come through."

Sawin said any holdback of public school funds would have a two-fold negative effect:

• It would jeparodize the district's ability to make bill payments in following months, since more income doesn't arrive until mid-May.

• Interest earnings also would be reduced because the amount of money saved for the following months would be reduced and planned investments could not be made.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, Wood River valley:
Fair today. Increasing clouds on Sunday. Highs 25 to 35 both days. Lows 5 to 15 above zero.

Northern Nevada and Utah:
Variable clouds over Nevada through Sunday. Highs near 50, lows near 20. Partly cloudy today over Utah with increasing clouds and a few showers possible Sunday. Highs in the 40s, lows in the 20s.

Synopsis:
Cold air remains trapped by inversions resulting from high pressure above Idaho and the intermountain region.

The result is a return of chilly temperatures and areas of fog across much of southern Idaho.

On Friday, dense fog developed in the Caldwell area and eastern portions of the Treasure Valley, while patchy fog and smoke appeared in the Snake River valley. The cold air kept temperatures from climbing even though sunshine filtered through the haze.

Afternoon temperatures were generally in the 30s, although some readings in the north and southwest edged into the 40s. The state's warmest reading was 51 degrees at Hagerman.

Clear skies allowed morning lows to drop into the teens over much of Idaho, with Stanley's 13 below zero the coldest.

The extended forecast for the Magic Valley calls for mostly cloudy Monday through Wednesday with an increasing chance of rain showers in the low valleys and snow showers over the mountains. Highs will be in the 30s and 40s with lows in the teens and 20s. Similar conditions are forecast for northern Idaho.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the warmest temperature reported was 84 degrees at Los Angeles and Thermal, Calif., and the coldest was 10 below zero at West Yellowstone, Mont.

Aides working on the weaning of Reagan

By FRED BARNES
The Baltimore

Analysis

WASHINGTON -- President Reagan, ever the optimist, was eager to paint as rosy an economic outlook as possible at his press conference last Sept. 28. He would boast at the nationally televised session, he told his aides, of steadily dwindling deficits in the years after 1983.

Not so fast, interjected Budget Director David A. Stockman. The deficit projection is flat, with no shrinking, he said. "It's supposed to be going down," the president snapped. "Isn't that what our forecast said?" Well, yes, Stockman replied, but that was the old, outdated forecast.

"If I'd known that, I wouldn't have supported the tax increase," Reagan said testily. And at his press conference hours later, he declared there was no chance he'd support a new tax hike "unless there's a palace coup and I'm overtaken or overthrown."

That was an episode, tense and discordant, in a drama that is now unfolding more furiously than ever at the White House, as the president prepares to deliver his State of the Union address and unveil his 1984 budget. The drama is the Weaning of Ronald Reagan.

Confronted by a troubled economy, staggered deficit projections and a stormy political climate, Reagan is being weaned from the conservative ideology that was the wellspring of his campaign rhetoric and the inspiration for the controversial economic program he set in place in 1981.

It is a painful process for Reagan, who often finds it difficult to concede that his policies are changing. It is also painful for his White House advisers and congressional allies, who have discovered that the task of steering the president toward a new course takes extraordinary patience and maturity.

But it does not take a palace coup. Within weeks after Reagan promised no new taxes, he agreed to propose a five-cents-a-gallon boost in the gasoline tax. He said this was a "user fee." Last summer, when he gave his assent to a $98 billion tax increase, he called it "tax reform."

Now, the president is on the verge of proposing still another tax hike, but he may be able to insist that he really isn't doing so. The new taxes would go into effect only if, in 1985, the projected budget deficit exceeds roughly $100 billion.

However, this is merely a fig leaf, a presidential aide suggested, to make the tax boost acceptable to the president. The aide indicated that the taxes are virtually certain to be triggered, should the proposal gain congressional passage.

Coaxing Reagan to embrace new taxes, even while clinging to his anti-tax rhetoric, was no easy feat for his advisers. A year ago, they lobbied for excise tax increases and lost, only to get Reagan's approval of the tax hike that Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kans.) pushed through Congress last summer.

This time, White House aides, weary of pressuring Reagan themselves, enlisted leading Senate Republicans to prompt the president to go along with new taxes.

Meanwhile, the weaning of President Reagan has touched also on defense spending, which the president has been obdurately opposed to trimming. Under duress, he and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger endorsed $8 billion in cuts for 1984.

Like deficits, re-election politics have intruded upon the president, leaving him vulnerable to arguments by his more pragmatic aides that he should compromise. Reagan has not made up his mind whether to seek a second term, but aides said he doesn't want to foreclose that option.

As a result, he and his political strategists are wary of having the Social Security issue hanging over a Reagan candidacy in 1984. Thus, the president is said to be ready to endorse a compromise solution to the Social Security system's financial ills.

The compromise would involve swallowing tax increases. But the president would be able to argue that he was merely accelerating payroll tax boosts set for the late 1980s by President Jimmy Carter. And any boost in the Social Security tax rate, he might contend, would be deductible from the income taxes of low and middle income citizens.

This, of course, is not the Social Security solution preferred by the activist conservatives who have backed Reagan for years. They liked the Reagan proposal, issued in May, 1981, and immediately withdrawn, for paring benefits, not driving up taxes.

But Reagan has drifted far from that position, made during the time that he appeared to be the most ideological president in decades. No longer do the president and his advisers worry much about appeasing the GOP's conservative wing.

Ohio farmer loses fight to save farm

LONDON, Ohio (UPI) — Doug Dailey lost the battle to save his family farm from auction Friday, but supporters said the fight against foreclosures in a time of economic troubles is just getting started.

"This is a sad day for agriculture," said Virgil Thompson, president of the Ohio Farmers Union. "Something has got to be done to save family farms."

Dailey, whose financial woes had become a rallying point for central Ohio farmers who say they are being unfairly forced out of business, stood with his wife, Pamela, at the bottom of the Madison County Courthouse steps as his 191 acres were sold at public auction.

An official of the Federal Land Bank in Louisville, Ky., which held the first lien against Dailey's property, bid $225,000 and bought the property.

Dailey became mired in debt the past few years because of poor weather, high interest rates and low crop prices. The FLB and its local agency, the Production Credit Association, sought foreclosure when he failed to make payments on his $419,602 debt.

The Daileys were surrounded by an estimated 700 farmers, curious onlookers and reporters during the auction. About 150 of the farmers surged toward the steps of the century-old building and chanted, "No Sale, No Sale," in an attempt to drown out the proceedings.

Dailey and his wife joined in the chants and later urged the crowd to continue the fight against farm foreclosures.

"The PCA can take me on. They can take you on. But they can't take us all on," he said.

Doug Dailey bows his head as his farm is sold

It took Sheriff Stephen V. Saltsman 21 minutes to read the description of the property, and the crowd chanted the entire time.

The crowd erupted into a chorus of boos when the bid figure, and then the word "sold," was written on the board by a sheriff's deputy.

"Our only concern was outside troublemakers," Saltsman said. "We know these people and they're good people. We sympathize with the situation they're in."

The farmers union and the Family Farm Movement helped organize the rally and a tractorcade last week from Dailey's farm to London to protest the foreclosure.

The farmers are pressing the state legislature to pass a law requiring a moratorium on all farm foreclosures.

Kimball eulogizes LeGrand Richards

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball Friday eulogized the late Mormon apostle LeGrand Richards as a unique preacher and "one of the greatest missionaries of our time."

"Brother Richards' soul radiated with missionary zeal," said Kimball in a message read by his personal secretary Arthur Haycock at funeral services for Richards in the Salt Lake Tabernacle.

Richards, a member of the Mormon Church's governing Council of Twelve Apostles, died Tuesday at the age of 96. He was the oldest general authority of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and had served as a church leader for 41 years.

"Brother Richards was one of the greatest missionaries of our time," said Kimball, 87, who has been in ill health and unable to deliver his own speeches.

"He reminded me of a modern-day Apostle Paul. He never missed an opportunity to have a gospel conversation."

Kimball also said Richards was a unique and interesting speaker.

"He rarely, if ever, delivered a message from a written text. He just spoke from his heart," said Kimball. "I don't think anyone ever dozed during one of his sermons."

Federal judge rules Supreme Court erred

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — A federal judge Friday threw out a lawsuit challenging two Alabama classroom prayer laws and declared that the U.S. Supreme Court misread history when it banned school prayer 21 years ago.

The action by U.S. District Judge W. Brevard Hand let stand a state law allowing teacher-led prayers in public schools and another law allowing one-minute of silent meditation or prayer.

Hand said the Supreme Court misinterpreted the Constitution's separation of church and state in outlawing school prayer in 1962.

The founding fathers who drafted the First Amendment, which guarantees freedom of speech and religion, "never intended to erect an absolute wall of separation between the federal government and religion," he said.

"This court's indepth review of the relative history and documents and its reading of the scholary analysis convinced it that the U.S. Supreme Court has erred in its reading of history," Hand wrote.

"Perhaps this opinion will be no more than a voice crying in the wilderness, and this attempt to right that which this court is persuaded is a misreading of history will come to nothing more than blowing in the hurricane," he said.

Hand's 66-page ruling dismissed a suit filed by agnostic Ishmael Jaffree against both state prayer laws. The judge said the suit is a matter the state courts might be better suited to deal with.

"My basic reaction is that the judge has gone off like a loose cannon," said Jaffree, who is a lawyer. "He'll quickly be reversed when this is appealed to the 11th Circuit" U.S. Court of Appeals. "It's like a judge deciding, 'I'm not going to follow the law. I'm going to make some new laws of my own.'"

Reagan vetoes Florida wilderness bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- President Reagan reluctantly vetoed a major Florida wilderness bill Friday, but promised the 49,000 acres of wildlands involved will be protected until Congress passes it again -- at less cost to taxpayers.

The legislation was designed to create seven wilderness areas in Florida. It also would effectively protect the Osceola National Forest in northern Florida from irreparable harm caused by phosphate mining.

In a statement explaining his action, Reagan said, "I regret that this (veto) is necessary because I support the wilderness designations." He noted the "unique habitat" of the areas "would be a particularly valuable addition to the national wilderness system."

But he concluded the legislation would add to the system "in a way that is unnecessarily costly to the federal taxpayer," because it might result in four phosphate mining firms receiving as much as $200 million in mineral "credits" as compensation for strip mining rights in the wilderness areas.

Environmental groups that lobbied for the legislation were disappointed by the veto, but relieved that the Florida lands are still protected.

"We would much prefer to have the wilderness bill signed," said Peter Coppelman of The Wilderness Society. "We do not go along with his rationale for vetoing the bill -- that it creates mineral credit rights that would not have otherwise existed, absent the legislation."

In vetoing the bill, Reagan is the first president to reject such a wilderness measure since the federal Wilderness Act was passed in 1964.

Reagan said he strongly opposes the concept of creating new wilderness areas by granting such mineral credits -- "rights that, absent this legislation, might not otherwise have existed."

The companies could use the credits in future bidding for mineral rights on other public lands. The firms are Monsanto Chemical Products Co., Kerr-McGee Corp., Global Exploration Co. and Pittsburgh & Midway Coal Mining Co.

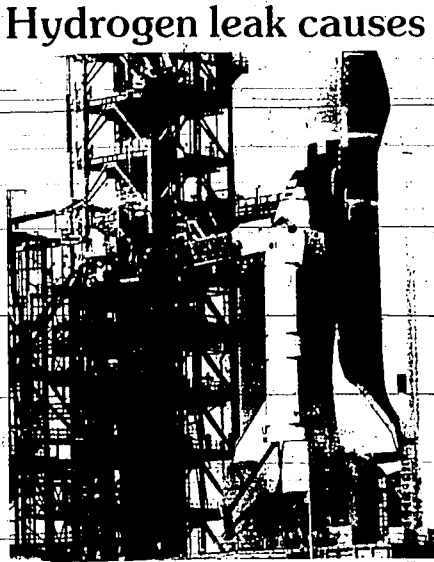
In a related announcement, the Interior Department said it is banning phosphate strip mining in the Osceola forest.

The department said Interior Secretary James Watt based the decision "on a recent environmental study which found there is no current technology to ensure a reasonable likelihood of reclamation of mined areas."

In the absence of such technology, the phosphate rights do not qualify for a legal designation as "valuable," which allowed the Interior Department to reject the mining applications without compensating the companies.

Congress could then reaffirm the administrative action through legislation that Reagan said he would sign.

Hydrogen leak causes second shuttle firing



The shuttle at its launch pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) -- Enough hydrogen entered the rear section of the new Challenger space shuttle during a ground test firing last month to raise the possibility of a fire hazard briefly during its maiden flight, engineers said Friday.

But Horace Lamberth, vehicle engineering director, said there would not have been enough of the flammable gas to cause an explosion even if oxygen and an ignition source were present.

Engineers have been unable to trace the source of that hydrogen. As a result, they plan to test fire the Challenger's three main engines an unprecedented second time on or about Jan. 26.

The Challenger, successor to the Columbia, was originally scheduled to blast off on its maiden voyage later this month, but the hydrogen leak has pushed the launch back to late February, at the earliest.

The Challenger's second flight, the seventh shuttle mission, will be delayed beyond its previous target date of April 20, NASA officials said. The eighth mission, scheduled for late June, also will be affected.

Lamberth said dozens of pieces of special equipment such as sensors, cameras and collection devices will be mounted on the shuttle during the upcoming test firing to aid in locating the source of the leak in the rear engine compartment.

"If we are still confused after that -- and I don't see how with all the instruments we have -- we'll have to take further steps," said Lamberth.

He declined to detail the steps and would not speculate on the effect the discovery of more leaking hydrogen would have on the shuttle schedule.

Tests after the Dec. 18 drill at the Kennedy Space Center showed the presence of six times the amount of hydrogen considered safe for the shuttle launch, Lamberth said.

Liquid hydrogen, a highly flammable fuel, and liquid oxygen are the two propellants that drive the shuttle's three main engines.

"With the concentration (of hydrogen) we have right now, we're taking about a, first -- not an explosion," said Lamberth.

He said the leaking hydrogen would have to be mixed with oxygen -- which so far has not been discovered in the area -- and ignited by "something less that what you'd get from a car spark plug" to start a fire.

Such combustion would be likely only during a 20-second interval shortly after takeoff, he said.

Astronauts Paul Weitz, Karol Bobko, Donald Peterson and Story Musgrave are scheduled to fly the Challenger on its inaugural mission. Their key objective will be launch a giant tracking satellite.

Brackett wants cut in legislators' pay

REP. NOY BRACKETT
To fight pay raise

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

Idaho Legislature

BOISE -- A House committee chairman said Friday he will offer resolutions to reduce lawmakers' pay by 10 percent or entirely cancel this year's new legislative compensation package, reviving the formula originated in 1978.

Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, Ways and Means Committee chairman, said he believes many Idahoans resent pay increases for legislators in the wake of the controversial salary hikes that congressmen gave themselves last month.

Brackett said one concurrent resolution already drafted would cut legislators' pay by one-tenth, but leave intact a package of expense increases that over the next two years would cost the state about $260,000 above the old level.

He said a second measure now being prepared by staff aides would invalidate the new compensation package, which went into effect Dec. 1 upon the approval of a special citizens' committee established several years ago to handle the touchy issue for the Legislature.

The package will take permanent force before the end of January unless both houses vote to cancel it.

Brackett said he might take one or both of his resolutions before a House panel -- probably the State Affairs Committee -- next week.

The fifth-term legislator said his effort has the blessing of House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, who has said he opposes the new compensation package.

House Majority Caucus Chairman Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said Friday that GOP representatives discussed the issue behind closed doors Thursday, but took no vote on whether to fight or support the new salary package.

Rep. Melvin Hammond of Rexburg, leader of the Democratic minority, said members of his party also did not adopt a formal caucus policy, but he said most of the 19 Democrats don't oppose the package.

"Some of our caucus members are desperate for the expense money," Hammond said. "For those well-off, it's no problem. But for some of us, like school teachers, they need a reasonable (expense) allowance."

WPPSS official wants plant work to continue

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) -- The chairman of the Washington Public Power Supply System executive board said Friday slowing down work on nuclear plant WNP-3 would be like bulldozing piles of money into Puget Sound.

Chairman Carl Halvorson said it would cost between $300 million to $500 million dollars to "ramp down" work on the project at Satsop, Wash.

"It would be like dumping pile after pile of money on the shores of Puget Sound and bulldozing it into the water," Halvorson said.

The supply system will run out of construction funds for WNP-3 in May and the feasibility of selling more bonds is clouded by WPPSS' apparent technical default on bonds for two terminated nuclear plant, WNP-4 and WNP-5.

"This board must decide next month rather to ramp down No. 3 for finan .l reasons," Halvorson said. "No. 3 will require a very substantial amount of money to complete."

The supply system will need about $960 million to complete the project, now about two-thirds finished.

As the WPPSS executive board discussed the problem, the system was advised that Standard and Poor's had lowered its WPPSS bond rating from AAA to AA for plants 1, 2 and 3.

"We knew they were reviewing the rating on these bonds," Halvorson said. "We were relatively relieved they reduced us by only a minor amount."

On another matter, Halvorson voiced his support of efforts to find a California market for electricity to be generated by the system's WNP-4 and WNP-5 plants which were terminated a year ago.

"If we can pay the mortgage off in California over the next 10 or 15 years and keep the resource here, how are we hurt?" Halvorson said. "We're not hurt at all."

The question of whether 88 participating utilities will be forced to pay off $2.25 billion in outstanding construction bonds for plants 4 and 5 is now before the courts.

Air Force: Salmon must tolerate sonic booms

SALMON (UPI) -- Air Force officials say high-altitude training flights and accompanying sonic booms which have been annoying Salmon residents are an unavoidable side-effect of maintaining the nation's military readiness.

In a letter to residents, Col. John B. McTasney of the Air Force Office of Legislative Liason in Washington D.C. said officials do everything possible to reduce the nuisance of sonic booms which occur when jets shoot through the skies over central Idaho.

But he said some annoyance is inevitable, adding officials do not believe the flights have caused any damage to property or the emotional health of Salmon citizens -- as alleged by several residents.

The explanation was sought by resident Lily M. McCowan, who alleged the booms have cracked ceilings and walls, sent china plunging to home floors and sparked "flashbacks" in Vietnam-era veterans recalling the terror of the war in Southeast Asia.

"The Air Force is sympathetic to the problem of the citizen who has been annoyed by sonic booms," McTasney said in the letter, which was delivered to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, for relay to Mrs. McCowan.

Sen. Cranston with his wife, Norma, and Assemblywoman Maxine Waters

Democratic hopefuls gather

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Seven 1984 Democratic presidential hopefuls, in their first major joint appearance of the campaign this year, address 2,000 party leaders at the California Democratic State Convention this weekend.

The convention opened Friday with a flurry of committee meetings, news conferences and social functions.

All the presidential contenders will address the convention Saturday and it winds up Sunday with a business session.

The nearly 2,000 delegates and alternates already have been polled on their presidential preferences by the Los Angeles Times, and a local television station may take a second poll after they hear the candidates.

Sen. Alan Cranston hopes to make a strong showing in his home state as part of a campaign strategy designed to move him out of the pack and closer to the acknowledged Democratic front-runner, former Vice President Walter Mondale.

"Because the poll was taken before the convention we expect that uncommitted or undecided will get most of the votes," said Sergio Bendixen, Cranston's campaign manager. "But among the candidates who do get votes, we hope to finish first and expect that Mondale will finish second."

The Cranston campaign has been doing an active lobbying campaign among the delegates. Earlier this week Cranston became the second Democrat, along with Mondale, to qualify for federal campaign funds.

Cranston likely will become the first formally announced candidate for president on Feb. 2, with Mondale planning to announce Feb. 21.

Others scheduled to appear at the convention are Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and Gary Hart of Colorado, all of whom have indicated they will be candidates. Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona and Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, who say they have not yet made up their minds whether to run, also will address the delegates.

Cranston as the home-state favorite and Mondale as the front-runner have been given favored status at the convention and will address the morning session in time to make East Coast media deadlines. The other hopefuls will speak in the afternoon.

Barney Clark suffering nosebleeds

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Doctors Friday sought to stem the "moderate to severe" nose bleeding that has plagued the recovery of artificial heart recipient Barney Clark for several days and could prolong his hospital stay.

Doctors inserted an inflatable balloon and gauze packs in the nose of the 61-year-old retired dentist who received the first permanent artificial heart 45 days ago.

"Dr. Clark continues to suffer moderate to severe nose bleeds caused by a combination of irritation from a nasal feeding tube and the thinness of his blood due to anti-coagulants he is receiving," said University of Utah Hospital spokesman John Dwan.

"Doctors do not see the nose bleeds as a major complication or setback, but as a problem causing Dr. Clark considerable discomfort."

The packs will remain in place for at least five days, Dwan added, and if the condition persists, it might prolong Clark's stay in the hospital.

Doctors said earlier this week Clark might be ready to leave the facility in two-to-three weeks.

GM cars may have problems

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Transportation Department announced Friday a "preliminary determination" of a safety defect in about 320,000 models of General Motors' 1980 X-body cars.

The department scheduled a Feb. 14 hearing on the tendency of the cars' rear brakes to lock in moderate to hard braking. It said such a defect could cause "the cars to spin out of control without warning."

GM, which voluntarily recalled 47,000 of these cars in 1981 for a brake pressure problem, will be permitted to present evidence at the hearing.

Afterwards, if the department concludes the suspected safety defect does exist, it will order a recall unless GM voluntarily recalls the cars, said spokesman Hal Paris.

Paris said the vehicles covered by the initial determination include the Chevrolet Citation, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark.

The investigation, conducted by the department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, was begun in July 1981 after the agency received more than 360 complaints of rear-braking problems in X-body cars.

These reports included allegations of more than 100 accidents involving 22 injuries and at least one death, the department said.

"It is our preliminary determination that there is a safety defect in about 320,000 cars," Paris said.

For Social Security panel

Reagan to extend deadline

By D'VERA COHN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Friday he will give his fractured Social Security commission "whatever time it takes" beyond Saturday's deadline, and angrily denounced "lies" he is out to destroy the retirement system.

Well-placed sources said the 15-member commission formally asked Reagan for a lease on life until Thursday, and that he took the request under consideration. It would be the second time Reagan extends the deadline of the panel, which originally was scheduled to go out of business Dec. 31.

Members of the bipartisan National Commission on Social Security Reform held private meetings Friday and talked by telephone in a last attempt to agree on a rescue package to raise up to $200 billion over the next seven years.

Commission leaders and White House aides working on a compromise plan combining payroll tax hikes and curbs on benefit growth planned to meet again Saturday.

But commission conservatives were rebelling at the tax hikes, hoping to assemble a bailout package that leans more heavily on benefits.

And Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., the panel's leading liberal, telephoned White House aide Richard Darman Friday to say he cannot back the compromise if it includes both a six-month delay in this year's cost-of-living payment and cuts in future early-retirement benefits, aides said.

If the commission needs more time, "we'll give them those few more days or whatever time it takes," Reagan told reporters at an impromptu nationally televised news conference. "We must resolve this problem."

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes earlier conceded the president "can't lock up the budget" until he has the commission's recommendations. The budget is expected to be wrapped up early next week.

Asked about remarks by White House chief of staff James Baker that the president would accept payroll tax hikes in a bailout package, Reagan replied: "I'm not going to make choices on this until I see what the entire thing is they're going to recommend."

Reagan, his face reddening, accused unnamed critics, presumably Democrats, of making a "political football" out of Social Security and of trying to "frighten the life out of a great many senior citizens" for political gain.

"No one I know in this government has any intention of taking away the checks that these people are getting," Reagan said, pounding the podium with his hand.

What's what

L.M. Boyd

Q. Can an 18-year-old run for governor in any state?

A. In nine states—California, Kansas, Maine, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

Q. "Agent Orange" ws the defoliant used in the Vietnam War. How'd it get its name?

A. From the orange-striped barrels the herbicide was shipped in.

Q. Among men over age 50, the crime rate is far lower among men who've been married only once than among men who've been divorced and remarried, right?

A. Almost right. It's true of all crimes except murder. Among men over 50, the man married but once is more likely to kill than the man married more than once, statistically.

CLOCKS

There's no such thing as an absolutely accurate timepiece. You have to settle for the best yet available -- one that neither gains nor loses more than one second every 6,000 years.

If your index finger is shorter than your ring finger, odds are you're a male. If your index finger is longer than your ring finger, odds are you're a female. Not in every case, but mostly.

Blondes outnumber redheads, but not by much; precisely, blondes, 8 percent; redheads 7 percent.

Only one in 28 obese teenagers eventually slims down to normal weight.

The foot of the American Indian typically is somewhat shorter than the foot of the average black or white.

PUBERTY

Q. Can you dig statistics to prove girls in tropical climates mature at an earlier age than girls up north?

A. Can only find facts to the contrary. Average girl in Chicago reaches puberty at age 12 years 6 months. In New Orleans, at 13 years 6 months. In Panama City, at 14. In Manila, at 15. Or so the medical researchers contend.

That Rocky Mountain flower called the snow buttercup contains real antifreeze.

M-A-S-H crew puts in its last da

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD — Hawkeye Pierce, Hotlips Houlihan and other members of the "M-A-S-H" television cast shot the final scenes of the Korean War Friday, bringing the award-winning series to an end after more than a decade.

"It's just another working day," a spokesman said, "but underneath the professionalism you can feel emotions building."

"M-A-S-H" became a fixture in the top 10 Nielsen ratings for 10 ½ years by mixing laughter with anti-war messages, and garnered 99 TV Emmy Award nominations and 14 Emmys.

Mobile Army Surgical Hospital 4077 leaves the air next month after making stars of most of its cast members. Friday's final scene was part of an episode to be seen in three or four weeks.

The cast voted last year to end the marathon series, most of them in the belief they had exhausted the possibilities of their characters.

"After 260 episodes I'm tired," said producer Burt Metcalfe. "We'd like to go out on top. We've exhausted the story lines and the actors want to get on with their careers."

Alan Alda, largely unknown before playing Hawkeye, has emerged as a respected writer and director of the show and, on the strength of his performances, also starred in several movies since the show began.

The last prime time telecast of "M-A-S-H," one of television's longest running situation comedies, will be a two-hour special Feb. 28.

The finale, filmed last November, brings the Korean conflict to a close and sends the doctors, nurses and support personnel the 4077th back to their homes in the United States.

Only Alda and Loretta Swit, who played Major Houlihan, remain from the original cast. In all, there were 11 stars during the show's run. Those who left the cast along the way were Wayne Rogers (Trapper John), Larry Linville (Frank Burns), Gary Burghoff (Radar) and McLean Stevenson (Henry Blake).

Standing muster for the last time Friday were current cast members William Christopher (Father Mulcahy), Jamie Farr (Corporal Klinger), Mike Farrell (B.J. Hunnicut), Harry Morgan (Colonel Potter) and David Ogden Stiers (Major Winchester).

600-pound suspect too fat for jail

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — A 600-pound man charged with giving a government informant weapons to kill three people has been transferred to a federal prison because he is too large for an ordinary jail cell.

Authorities said Friday that Oscar Joe "Tiny" Nichols was transferred late Thursday from the St. Clair County, Ill., jail in Belleville to the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield.

William L. Vallely, chief deputy U.S. marshal for southern Illinois, said Nichols had to be transferred because he could not be accommodated at the county jail.

Nichols told authorities he was on a diet and had lost about 150 pounds to drop his weight to 600 pounds.

Nichols appeared before a U.S. Magistrate Tuesday in St. Louis, where he was charged with giving an informant a sawed-off rifle, a revolver and silencer to kill three people in Florida for $3,000.

Authorities said the three people were two relatives of Nichols' girlfriend and her employer.

Bond for Nichols was set at $200,000 and he was taken to the Belleville jail.

"He's so big, he couldn't move around by himself," said a corrections officer at the jail. "We couldn't even fit him in a cell with a bunk."

Jail officials, who resorted to moving Nichols on a dolly, said the prisoner was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Belleville late Wednesday after he told authorities he slipped off a mattress and was feeling ill.

"He wasn't injured in any way at the jail," Vallely said. "You just can't house a guy that size in a regular jail. If he sits too long, his circulation gets bad. Apparently, his legs went numb from staying in the cell."

Sam Spade's haunt burns

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Historic John's Grill, detective Sam Spade's hangout in Dashiell Hammett's novel, "The Maltese Falcon," was badly damaged in a pre-dawn blaze Friday and may not reopen for months.

A truckload of memorabilia, however, was saved from flames, which scorched upstairs dining rooms where posters and photographs from the movie starring Humphrey Bogart adorned the walls and staircase.

"Sam Spade would be pretty desolate about this," said Don Herron, a Hammett fan who gives walking tours of the late author's haunts in the city. "He wouldn't have a favorite place to drink for a month or so."

The three-alarm blaze started in the rear of the 75-year-old restaurant near the kitchen and quickly spread across the upper floors of two buildings, causing $2 million damage, said Fire Chief Emmett Condon.

OUR CUSTOMERS COMPLAIN!

THAT'S RIGHT! We're the first to admit it — our customers frequently complain that we give them too much food for their money. That's why we stopped our "All You Can Eat" chicken & catfish specials. We discovered that 99% of our customers never ate more than the first plate we served them. There was just too much food on their plate.

Why then, we asked ourselves, try to lure people into our restaurant with promises of more food than they could possibly eat anyway. Instead, we added these specials as regular features on our new Gigantic menu and they are now available anytime! Not just on a certain day of the week.

If you feel you are served too much food, don't worry! We'll gladly wrap it for you to take home. And for those of you who already know how large our servings are, feel free to split an order with your dining partner, we won't object, as we've told you many times, we want to keep you as friends and customers and intend to continue with our fabulous food, comfortable atmosphere and good service.

Why not stop by and try our expanded menu or enjoy one of our $2.50 lunch or $2.99 dinner specials featuring items like Homemade Chicken Pot Pie, Bacon wrapped sirloin, Ham & Limas with cornbread and many other favorites which rotate daily. Salvadoran police break up right-wing protest

By MICHAEL W. DRUDGE
United Press International

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Police politely broke up a demonstration Friday of 200 rightist women protesting a visit by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and calling for the ouster of the nation's defense minister.

No one was injured or arrested.

The 200 women in the rightist "Association of Patriotic Women" gathered at the residential San Salvador neighborhood of La Escalon for the protest meeting.

The women carried signs in support of Lt. Col. Sigifredo Ochoa and calling for the ouster of Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia.

Ochoa led a week-long rebellion to demand Garcia's resignation, accusing him of corruption and incompetence in running the 3-year-old war against leftist rebels.

He gave up the rebellion Wednesday and will be given a post abroad.

"Garcia is a Guerrilla," and "We Need 14 More Like Ochoa," read some of the signs carried by the women.

Other signs protested the visit of Dodd, who arrived in El Salvador Thursday on a fact-finding mission.

The women considered Dodd an opponent of continued U.S. aid to El Salvador.

Some 100 agents of the Treasury police, blamed by human rights groups for much of the nation's rampant political violence, surrounded the area. The commanding officer asked the women to leave.

The incident was the first time police have broken up a demonstration by a rightist organization. The women are supporters of the rightist Party of National Conciliation under controversial Roberto d'Aubuisson.

Public demonstrations are forbidden in El Salvador because of a state of siege that is routinely renewed every month by the Salvadoran government.

Habib's shuttle continues

By JACK REDDEN
United Press International

U.S. Middle East envoy Philip Habib flew to Beirut Friday to seek Lebanese assistance in speeding up the talks with Israel, but Lebanon warned of "long and difficult" negotiations ahead.

Habib, accompanied by his second-in-command, Morris Draper, arrived from Tel Aviv where he was reported pushing Israel to set a Feb. 12 deadline for beginning the withdrawal of its 30,000 forces from Lebanon.

Dispatched from Washington earlier this week, Habib met with Lebanese President Amin Gemayel Friday evening. Official Lebanese radio said. "Habib was carrying new and serious instructions" to spur the Israeli-Lebanese talks when they resume Monday.

In an apparent attempt to get Syrian agreement on the Lebanese moves to get all Syrian, Palestinian and Israeli forces out of Lebanon, Gemayel briefed Syrian President Hafez Assad by telephone Friday night, state run Damascus radio said.

Gemayel planned to send a personal envoy to Damascus Saturday, the radio said.

But with the two countries expressing different interpretations of the agenda they agreed to Thursday, and Syria's vow to veto any Lebanese-Israeli agreement it finds threatening, negotiations could be slow-moving.

"A (Lebanese) government spokesman today warned against excessive optimism which prevailed yesterday following the announcement of the agreement on the agenda," Lebanon's official National News Agency said.

"The spokesman noted that long and difficult negotiations were still ahead and the Lebanese authorities will be hard pressed to ensure the interests of Lebanon in the talks."

Poles deny work permit for Walesa

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Lech Walesa, former leader of the Solidarity union, Friday was refused a work certificate for his old job as an electrician at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk by officials who said his documents were incomplete.

"I have not been reinstated," a disappointed Walesa said after being stopped and turned away at the shipyard gate on being told "some problems have to be cleared," said sources in Gdansk.

Shipyard officials said Walesa was not allowed to enter because he failed to meet "certain formalities."

They said as soon as Walesa has "accounted for all administrative problems" such as leaves, pay and related items accumulated while he held office in Solidarity, he might be given a work certificate.

"The decision on reinstatement will be made on Monday," a personnel officer said.

In another development, police seized an illegal printshop in the town of Milanowek, just outside Warsaw, the official Polish news agency PAP said.

The printshop was run by the sympathizers of the Committee for the Defense of Workers, a dissident group which was outlawed in 1981 after Solidarity was formed.

Printing equipment and some 23,000 brochures and leaflets were confiscated by the police, PAP said.

Soviets ban pop group

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Blue Guitars pop music group has been banned in Moscow because its members have been dodging concerts at remote Soviet army bases in Afghanistan, the military newspaper Red Star said Friday.

"Officers and soldiers were not satisfied with the performance or the behavior of the group," the newspaper said, citing letters from frontline units.

"Despite the fact that soldiers were looking forward to the concerts, the group managed to escape performances in the most remote places under the excuse they did not have the piano and necessary electrical equipment."

As a result, the Blue Guitars were banned from performing in Moscow or touring abroad.

The newspaper urged that other performers including ballet and opera artists appear in Afghanistan "to remind soldiers of home."

LAWRENCE KNIGGE
Extra facility needed

Knigge wants a prison in Gooding

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

BOISE -- The vacant tuberculosis hospital in Gooding may be remodeled into a state prison facility, if a plan revealed Friday is approved.

"There's a critical need for additional prison facilities in this state, and that need will only grow as stiffer drunken-driving legislation is passed and more out-of-work people turn to crime," says Rep. Lawrence Knigge, R-Filer.

In response, Knigge has proposed converting the old hospital, which is owned by the state, into either a minimum- or maximum-security prison.

"The building is there, and frankly, with the way farm prices and the economy is, Gooding certainly could use another employer," Knigge says.

Knigge will ask for a feasibility study to be done this year to assess the possibility and costs of such a conversion. He plans to call for the study from his position on the state's Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council, which oversees the maintenance of all state buildings. But to date, he has no estimates of costs or timetables.

Bill Crowl, the state corrections director, says that he can support Knigge's call for a feasibility study. While Crowl did not specifically endorse converting the hospital into some type of prison, he said Friday that he would support any feasible way of increasing prison space, to help curb overcrowding at the state prison in Boise.

"Personally, I would prefer to see a minimum-security facility placed in Gooding, but I'm not an expert," Knigge says. "Maybe a maximum-security prison would be the best way to go. But that's for the experts to decide."

He says that he does expect some opposition to his proposal from Gooding residents "who don't want a prison and undesirables in their town."

Knigge says, however, that he has received commitments from two area employers to use inmates in work-training programs if a minimum-security prison is established in Gooding.

"Both Monty Baker of Blincoe's meat-packing plant and Vern France, who operates a large cattle-feeding operation, have told me they would help out if the program is set up right," Knigge said Friday.

Gooding Mayor Gene Heller also has responded favorably to Knigge's plan.

"It definitely would be good for the community, and I'm sure there would be other opportunities for work-release programs around the area," Heller said.

"I feel the general climate within our business community is for putting the hospital to use," Heller said Friday. "Gov. John) Evans had a fellow come out and go through the hospital with me, and he was amazed at its good condition and how much space is available there.

"If it is used as a prison, I would prefer it to be a minimum-security facility, but I would not look negatively on a maximum-security plan, either," Heller said. "I need much more information before I would decide either way."

Heller said a free flow of information also would be necessary to achieve confidence among Gooding residents. He speculated that if other

Zoning panel head resigns

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The chairman of the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission resigned in a surprise move Thursday.

C.M. Lanting of Hollister, a 14-year veteran of the zoning board, cited the county commission's decision last month not to reappoint three members of the zoning board -- Marilyn Butler of Buhl, Annette Jenkins of Twin Falls and Jim Wheeler of Castleford -- as one reason for the move.

"The recent replacement by the county commissioners of members of the zoning board with much less tenure of office than myself points out the fact that maybe I have been a member too long," Lanting said in his letter of resignation.

"However, I strongly feel it takes two or more years of active participation in zoning to become familiar with the intent of the comprehensive land-use plan and the zoning ordinance."

At its Thursday night meeting, the zoning board elected Robert Pettygrove of Hansen to replace Lanting, who served as chairman for seven years.

Friday, Lanting said that he didn't believe the new appointments will change the zoning board's philosophy, which has been aimed at protecting agricultural land from urban encroachment.

"The new members, what I've seen of them last night (Thursday), I think

After being tranquilized, a beefalo bull is laid out on a special sled prior to being rescued from the South Hills where it had been trapped by snow

Animals found trapped in South Hills

Snowmobilers, cowboys, rangers rescue bulls

TWIN FALLS — There's "snow place" like home for two bulls rescued this week from the South Hills.

The bull-saving mission was mounted by a group of snowmobilers, cowboys and U.S. Forest Service personnel.

The bulls -- a Hereford and a crossbreed beefalo -- were left behind two months ago during a fall cattle roundup, and then trapped by several feet of snow. They holed up near some water in the Winecup Spring area of Deadline Ridge in the South Hills, according to Forest Service spokesman Ed Waldapfel.

They were spotted by members of the Magic Valley Snowmobilers Club about a week ago. Then, some club members started hauling hay to the snowbound bulls to help keep them alive, Waldapfel says.

A rescue effort was organized after the owners of the two bulls, Winslow Whiteley and Sunset Livestock, both of Oakley, were located.

A special livestock sled was built to haul the 1,000-pound bulls from the hills one at a time. On Wednesday, 12 snowmobilers, three cowboys and several Forest Service personnel set out to make the rescue.

The first bull was tranquilized and loaded on the sled for rescue without incident, Waldapfel says. But the second bull apparently was watching the action, and wanted no part of it.

The bull ran, and the rescue became a roundup, as the snowmobilers gave chase. Eventually, the reluctant bull was caught.

Each bull was carried by sled for about 14 miles to a waiting livestock truck, which returned them to their homes on the range near Oakley.

It is not "highly unusual" for livestock to be left behind during a fall roundup, Waldapfel says. Often when that happens, the winter snows drive them out of the hills, and they wander home -- or close to it -- on their own.

Sometimes, they are trapped by the snow in the hills, but survive, as long as the winter remains mild, he says.

And sometimes they can be rescued by those daring young men in their snowmobiles.

"This story is not just a bunch of 'bull' -- it really happened," Waldapfel said Friday.

Yamaha donates 'cycles to CSI

TWIN FALLS -- The College of Southern Idaho has received 19 Yamaha motorcycles for use by the school's trade and industrial program's small-engine classes.

Instructor John Martin says this is the largest donation of its kind that CSI ever has received. The 1982 model motorcycles are valued at more than $50,000.

Martin says they will be used to teach students how to repair and maintain the vehicles. Each motorcycle will be taken apart and put together many times, he says.

Gary Oliver, of Century Automotive in Twin Falls, was instrumental in obtaining the motorcycles from Yamaha for the CSI program.

Judge backs Royal Lounge over search warrant dispute

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- A Twin Falls judge has struck down a 36-year-old state law that gave state Department of Law Enforcement officials authority to inspect bars without search warrants.

On Friday, Judge Theron Ward, of the Fifth District Court, found the law unconstitutional after a lawyer for the Royal Lounge of Twin Falls argued that it violated the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which requires search warrants, and that the state law was unconstitutionally vague and overly broad.

Ward also reversed the department's decision to temporarily suspend the establishment's operating license, after two employees refused to allow state and local police to enter the business during an early morning inspection on Jan. 1, 1982.

A spokesman for the department said late Friday that the decision will be appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court.

State investigators said they decided to inspect the business when they noticed an unusual number of cars in the bar's parking lot, at 229 Second Ave. E., at 2:45 a.m.

Under Idaho law, such establishments are to close at 1:30 a.m.

But the bar's employees, later identified as manager Guy McAllister and Lee Ann Frates, did not respond when the officers, who identified themselves, knocked at the bar's door.

Testifying before a fact-finding hearing, held in March, the employees said they were counting receipts for the day. They said they were unsure whether the persons knocking at the door actually were police officers.

The state department eventually suspended the bar's operating license, under its legal right to make inspections.

The suspension was scheduled to run for one weekend in late August. But that order was stayed when the owners of the bar appealed the decision in the district court.

Given the law's vague language, the possibilities for abuse resembled a "parade of horribles," said K. Ellen Baxter, who represented the Royal Lounge during Friday's hearing.

"This is the kind of action that is incumbent upon the judiciary to act upon," she said. "I would ask the court to protect the citizens of this

Ex-ag agent charged

Wilson bound over in funds case

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME -- Jesse Wilson, the former agricultural extension agent in Jerome County, was bound over Friday to Fifth District Court on a felony charge of misuse of public funds.

Judge Roger Burdick reached that decision Friday afternoon, following a preliminary hearing in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Jerome.

The hearing, which was closed to the public, lasted only about an hour. At its conclusion, Burdick took the case under advisement, until announcing his decision late in the afternoon.

Defense attorney Monte Carlson of Twin Falls had requested that the court close the hearing to the public.

Wilson transferred to an extension-service job in Power County late last fall.

He is charged with writing two checks to himself last year from the rodent-control fund of the Jerome County extension office, without proper receipts. The first check was dated March 17 and the second June 20. Each check was in the amount of $100.

An investigation of Jerome County officials last summer by Harry DeHaan, the Twin Falls prosecutor who was named to head the probe, resulted in the charges against Wilson.

DeHaan's investigation was launched in connection with a bribery probe involving purchases of supplies made by former county Clerk Glenda Belk. Wilson was charged following an audit of the county's finances that DeHaan had ordered as part of his investigation.

The charges against Wilson originally were filed in September, but they were dismissed because the complaint failed to stipulate that the charge was a felony. A new complaint was filed later.

Wilson was released on his own recognizance after appearing for an arraignment in magistrate court on Nov. 1 on the revised complaint. He remains free without bond.

Wilson will appear for his arraignment in district court in Jerome as soon as a date is set.

In drug investigation

Burley police report no progress

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BURLEY — An investigation into the source of drugs suspected as the cause of two Burley deaths last weekend is at a "standstill," says Detective Pete Rodriguez of the Burley Police Department.

And Cassia County Coroner Bruce Young still is awaiting test results from a San Francisco forensic lab that may shed some light on why Angie Munoz, 35, and Romero Garcia, 31, died.

Meanwhile, George Rayes Castillo, no age available, of Heyburn, who was arrested on a heroin-possession charge last Tuesday as a result of the investigation into the case, left the Minidoka County Jail on Thursday, after a $25,000 property bond was posted.

No information was available on who posted Castillo's bond.

According to court officials, a request by Castillo's lawyer, Steven Ross, to reduce bond was denied Thursday by magistrate Judge Donald Workman.

Castillo's preliminary hearing is set Jan 25. in Fifth District Magistrate Court, court officials said Friday.

Rodriguez said no other arrests have been made as a result of the investigation.

The incident began Saturday, when Garcia was pronounced dead on arrival at Cassia County Memorial Hospital. Munoz died Sunday. An injected "narcotic" drug is suspected of causing the deaths, said Ray Mitchell, the Cassia County sheriff.

There were needle-marks on the arms of Munoz and Garcia, Young said.

Autopsies on the bodies this week showed "no physical" reason why the two died, Young said. But Blood and samples of other body fluids have been sent to a California lab for testing, to determine what type and amount of drugs, if any, were present.

Young said the testing will cost the county about $1,000, because the autopsy and blood tests were performed at private labs. Facilities for the blood testing were not available in Idaho, he said.

About a half-dozen persons checked into the Cassia hospital's emergency ward Sunday afternoon for testing, according to George Winn, the assistant hospital adminstrator.

Rodriguez says that these persons may have come in contact with some of the same batch of suspected drugs that the victims may have used.

However, none of those who came to the hospital were actually ill, Winn says. From all reports, they were just frightened by what happened.

No one has come for testing since Sunday, he says.

From kidnapper, robber

Judge accepts two guilty pleas

TWIN FALLS — A 25-year-old Twin Falls man pleaded guilty Friday to attempting to kidnap a Twin Falls woman outside a drive-in restaurant last month.

Joseph G. Burgfeld faces serving up to 12-and-a-half years in prison for his guilty plea, to attempted second-degree kidnapping.

He remains in the county jail, in lieu of $10,000 bail, following the Fifth District Court session.

Burgfeld was arrested last month and charged with attempting to abduct Linda Hammond, of 310 Crestview Drive, on Dec. 1, outside the Dairy Queen restaurant, 379 Addison Ave. W.

The woman broke free from Burgfeld before he could force her into his car, police said.

Judge Theron Ward ordered a presentence investigation.

In another case, a 23-year-old Ohio man pleaded guilty to robbing two Twin Falls grocery stores last month.

Jeffery Terrell pleaded guilty to the Dec. 7 robbery of a Safeway store, 1147 Filer Ave. E., and to the Dec. 17 robbery at Waremart, 1708 Kimberly Road.

Ward ordered a presentence investigation.

Earlier this week, Terrell's accomplice, 28-year-old Melvin Lamb, also of Ohio, pleaded guilty to robbery in connection with the Waremart incident.

Terrell faces serving up to 50 years in prison for his two robbery convictions. Lamb could be sentenced to serve up to 25 years for his single robbery conviction.

Both men remained in the county jail Friday, in lieu of $15,000 bail.

In other district court cases heard Friday:

• Ward ordered a 30-year-old Twin Falls man to serve an 18-month probation, in lieu of a prison sentence, for growing marijuana plants.

Robert William Mitchell, of 587 Gardner St., had pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana on Nov. 12. Mitchell said he grew the plants for his own consumption and had not planned to sell the drug.

• Jerry Leedom, 21, and Leroy Foster, 20, both of Twin Falls, pleaded guilty to grand-theft charges in connection with the November theft of an estimated $350 worth of meat from a Twin Falls man's freezer. Ward ordered presentence investigations and continued the defendants' release without bail.

• A 19-year-old Twin Falls man pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree burglary in connection with two automobile burglaries, committed in early October. Joseph Allen Taylor, of 1217½ Seventh St. E., could be sentenced to serve up to 15 years in prison on each count. Ward ordered a presentence investigation.

Neighbors' opposition leads to denial of Hansen-area lot split

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Resistance to the placement of a mobile home has killed a request to allow the division of a 20-acre parcel near Hansen.

On a 4-3 vote Thursday night, the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission denied a request, submitted by L. Gordon Carter of Twin Falls, for permission to divide two acres from a 20-acre parcel north of Hansen, near Fort Harney.

Carter was not present at the zoning board's public hearing on the issue.

But zoning board officials indicated that Carter planned to place a double-wide mobile home on the property and sell it as a residential unit.

A review committee, composed of zoning board and county commission members, recommended approval of the request.

They noted that the area is cut off from the rest of Carter's property by a canal, and that the smaller parcel is not being used productively.

But several residents of the area challenged that assessment.

"The standard approach has always been that it's nothing but a weed patch," said Lloyd Shewmaker of Kimberly.

However, Shewmaker contended that the smaller parcel was good farmland that should be protected from residential encroachment.

Developing the parcel for residential use could lead to a subdivision, he added.

"From one end of the county to the other, you have subdivisions that started with one or two houses, and the rest left in weeds," he said.

Walt Sinclair of Twin Falls agreed.

Sinclair said the need for residential development in the area had not been demonstrated.

"We're not very happy with the idea of a mobile home in there," he said.

Carter could appeal the zoning board's decision to the county commissioners.

In another matter Thursday night, the zoning board unanimously recommended approval of a request from Joe Schultz to rezone a five-acre parcel, located one-and-a-quarter miles east of Buhl, off U.S. 30, for commercial development.

The land, which is presently zoned for agricultural use, is located near an implement dealership.

Zoning board members concluded that the zoning change would be consistent with other commercial ventures in the area.

The county commission will hold a public hearing on the request and issue a final decision.

Finally, the board called for a public hearing next month on an issue that it thought had been resolved last month.

The issue is a 3-year-old request by Cecil Lyons of Buhl to rezone a 180-acre parcel, a mile west of Buhl and located on both sides of U.S. 30, for residential and commercial development. The land presently is zoned for agricultural use.

Last month, the zoning board recommended that the county commission approve the request. But the prosecutor's office said the zoning board's decision was legally defective and vulnerable to a court challenge.

Following a public hearing, the county commissioners last week complied with the prosecutor's advice and sent the issue back to the zoning board.

BID members will get assessments soon

TWIN FALLS — Businesses located within the newly created business improvement district in Twin Falls can expect to receive assessment bills sometime this month.

City Manager Tom Courtney said Friday that the assessment notices will be sent out within the next few weeks, and they will be due upon receipt.

On Nov. 1, Twin Falls City Council approved the creation of a business improvement district, which allows businesses to "tax" themselves to provide money for promotion and improvements.

Assessment payments are based on the type of business involved, its size and its location. Payments will be assessed retroactively to Nov. 1, the day the BID was created.

According to the BID bylaws, members more than 30 days delinquent in paying their assessments may not vote, hold office or participate in BID business until their payments are brought current.

The bylaws also say that legal action may be taken against BID members delinquent more than 60 days, with all legal costs being paid by the delinquent member.

Correction

BUHL — In a story in Thursday's Times-News about this week's Buhl City Council meeting, Terry Lechner, a councilman, was identified as having been appointed city building inspector. Lechner actually was named as the council's liaison with the city building inspector, Gene Hopkins.

Gooding

examples of community prisons around the nation could be cited as successful, few area residents would object to Knigge's proposal.

Citing the need for an extra prison facility in Idaho, Knigge says that the existing prison in Boise already lacks 100 to 150 maximum-security quarters.

"There's already too much mixing of minimum- and maximum-security prisoners. There's also overcrowding," he says. "We're asking for real trouble if we don't do something."

That trouble, he says, could arise in the form of another riot or more in-house murders and assaults.

"Since 1970, over 400 people have been placed in prison on drunken-driving convictions," he says. "There are 30 there right now. And with our plans to send more drunken drivers to prison, overcrowding will be unavoidable.

"Perhaps we could send these non-violent-type offenders to a facility in Gooding, where they could be contracted out to the Walker alcohol-treatment center," Knigge says. "There are a lot of angles to this that need to be considered."

Resign

will encourage that philosophy," he said.

But, he added, "Jenkins and Butler were just getting to the point where they were becoming valuable members, and here we're replacing them with someone who knows nothing about zoning."

Lanting's departure was preceded by yet another zoning board member's resignation. Ralph Jones of Filer submitted his resignation earlier this week, citing increased demands upon his time.

Last month, Jones, a three-year zoning board member, was appointed to the board of directors of the Idaho Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program.

"Due to this appointment, and because I have leased additional acres of farm ground, I find it necessary to terminate my membership to the county Planning and Zoning Board," Jones's resignation letter said.

County commission Chairman Ann Cover said Friday that the resignations were accepted with regret.

"We're sorry to lose them, but they had valid reasons," she said.

Ironically, the resignations led to the discovery that both Lanting's and Jones's terms of office had expired last month, Cover said.

"There was a gap in there that we missed," Cover said. "We're trying to go back and re-do all of these."

The confusion stems partially from the transition in the county zoning administrator's office, which recently was assumed by Ervin Wilkins, following the sudden death of Ed Woods, Cover said.

"It was one of the things, with all the changes, that they just didn't get around to letting me know," Lanting said Friday. "I wish I had known that. That would have made my decision much easier."

The oversight means that new Commissioner Judy Felton of Buhl will nominate Jones's replacement, since he lives in her district. Cover will nominate Lanting's replacement.

Had county officials discovered the expiration date earlier, it's likely that former Commissioner Merl Leonard would have selected the Filer farmer's replacement on the zoning board. Leonard's involvement last month in filling zoning board seats previously held by Butler and Wheeler generated some criticism from those who argued that task should have been reserved for Felton.

Lanting says he is not leaving on a sour note. But a number of changes in the zoning board — including the departure of Butler, Jenkins, and Wheeler; Woods' death; and the increasing amount of legal complications involved in zoning decisions — convinced him that it was a good time to go, he says.

"We all become stagnant when we've been in a job too long," he says. "Zoning has been good to me. There comes a time when everyone should hang up their hat, and I've reached that point."

state and declare the statute unconstitutional."

But Brian Donesley, a lawyer with the state Department of Law Enforcement, countered "that the law was clear to those persons involved in the liquor business. He added that the Fourth Amendment guarantee did not apply to a heavily regulated business, such as the liquor industry.

"There is no right to serve liquor," he said. "The only way that the Royal Lounge can serve liquor is if the state grants it the privilege, not the right, to serve liquor."

But Ward concluded that the law was flawed because it did not spell out what a bar owner or operator was required to do under such circumstances.

While the ruling is under appeal, state investigators may have to modify their tactics within the Magic Valley to comply with Ward's ruling, Donesley said. Ward's ruling does not apply to the rest of the state, he said.

"We're going to have to look at it. We'll have to talk to our people and see what the possible facts and circumstances might be," he said. "There are numerous types of circumstances, which would result in a search or an inspection or an examination or whatever. One may require a warrant. Another may not.

"Really, it's just a question of what the circumstances are to determine whether a search warrant will be required."

In social and spiritual needs

New church association will attempt to fill in the 'gaps'

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

Members of the Twin Falls Association of Churches share resources, information and a unified concern for the spiritual, social, emotional and physical needs of people in the area.

Composed of churches of different denominations, the association was founded in September, says president Barbara Bellus Upp, the associate minister of United First Methodist in Twin Falls.

During the planning of an event to raise funds for CROP — the Christian Rural Overseas Program — which provides self-help agricultural materials to Third World countries, several of the pastors "bonded" together with the idea of forming an ecumenical association, Upp says.

But the participating churches did not get together "just to be ecumenical," she says. They are working together on issues and problems, yet keeping their own identities and traditions, Upp says.

The association is independent of any national Christian organization.

United First Methodist, the Guadalupe Center, Church of the Brethren, Valley Christian, First United Presbyterian, all of Twin Falls, Castleford United Methodist and Filer United Methodist are the charter members of the county group. In addition, Upps says, more churches are showing an interest.

The Rev. Erv Huston, of the Church of the Brethren, says he believes the differences among the member congregations will not cause problems.

"The basic calling of the church is to unity. Part of unity is overcoming the doctrinal differences to meet the needs of the community of which we are all a part," Huston says.

Any congregation that joins is allowed one clergy and two lay representatives on the association's board of directors.

Instead of the usual all-clergy organization, the idea of including lay people in the organization from the "groundfloor" appeals to him, Huston says.

"There's a good sense of unity and no doctrinal dispules," Upp says.

Since its creation, the association has been busy.

It has established a Christian fellowship group at the College of Southern Idaho, which was the group's No. 1 objective.

The fellowship provides students and instructors at the junior college the opportunity to study Christian teachings together and discuss them, Upp says.

The CSI group meets at noon every Tuesday in Room 110 of the Shields Building. An evening monthly meeting also is held.

Pastors from the different churches involved take turns leading the CSI fellowship program, as they do in conducting services at the new Valley Vista Village senior-citizen complex in Twin Falls, Upp says.

With this sharing of duties, there is no sense of competition, she says.

One of the first activities the group sponsored was a study series on the nuclear-arms race.

An association committee is surveying the programs offered by area social-service agencies and churches to determine if there are any gaps in aid to the needy, Upp says. If there are, then the association wants to work toward filling those needs.

A walk-a-thon to raise money for CROP is planned for the spring, Huston says.

Group members also share information about happenings in their churches, so the word may be spread, Upp says.

"We let people know about the resources available," she says.

Another association objective is endeavoring to coordinate activities between the churches and other agencies involved in the areas of health, poverty and hunger problems. Also, the group plans to sponsor and act as a clearinghouse for efforts of national ecumenical agencies.

Although most groups start with ethusiasm, many are doomed to die because of member "burnout," disinterest or other problems. Upp says the association will try to avoid dissolution by maintaining a form loose enough so members will not be buried by the "weight of organization."

Meetings will be held when deemed necessary. Committees will be created to perform specific functions. They will avoid "tackling too much, too fast," Upp says.

She hopes that the association will grow. In fact, an open invitation to all churches to join is melded in the spirit and written in the constitution of the Twin Falls Association of Churches.

Members study nuclear race from Christian viewpoint

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The implications of the nuclear-arms race is the subject of a program currently offered by the Twin Falls Association of Churches.

"We felt there were a number of people who wanted to study the nuclear question from the faith prospective," says Rev. Erv Huston of the Church of the Brethren in Twin Falls, which is an association member.

Called a "Matter of Faith," the 10-week program began in September, meeting every two weeks. A book filled with articles about nuclear weapons — written from different points of view — is used in the sessions, says Barbara Bellus Upp, the association's president and the associate pastor of the United First Methodist in Twin Falls.

The book was published by a non-denominational ministry in Washington, D.C.

At each session, one article in the book is discussed. Attendance at the sessions has been between six to 16 persons.

In the program, Christians are not urged to write their congressman or protest the escalation of nuclear arms, Upp says.

"It's good for people of various denominations to get together to do some serious study," Upp says. "It's very important for Christians to understand what's going on in the world."

Christians should understand how the nuclear strength of the United States is used because they are citizens, she says.

"I feel so strongly that no one is ever going to win a nuclear war. Everyone will be a loser," says Edna Kuiken, who is participating in the session. "It's our Christian responsibility to get the world to recognize that. What I have learned has impressed me."

Although there is no clear message about the use of nuclear weapons stated in the study program, there is a message in what the gospel has to say about peacemaking, Upp says.

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the earth. Peacemaking has always been an important message in the teachings of Christ," she says.

To ensure your information is used, follow these guidelines:

- The deadline for church news is Thursday noon.
- Typewritten or plainly printed information is best; it helps eliminate errors.
- Provide full information — complete names, times, locations, day and date. Include the name of the community — we serve many — and a phone number to call if more information is needed.

If you have questions about church news, call 733-0931 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., and ask for Glenda May or Jon Kinney.

Christian storyteller will tell some 'tales' this Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — Christian storyteller Doug Bland will demonstrate his art next Wednesday, Jan. 19, at the Valley Christian Church in Twin Falls.

"I was looking for ways to communicate with people," says Bland, 30, who is a native of Twin Falls. "I always liked stories. My grandmother was a storyteller, and I remember how meaningful she made my childhood with the stories she told."

Bland, who now is pastor of the First Christian Church in Sumner, Wash., says he knows more than 150 stories, from fairy tales to folk tales to Biblical parables. The story he tells depends on his audience.

Bland says his reward for telling stories, especially those from foreign countries, is experiencing different cultures through their tales.

He also has written several stories of his own, including some dealing with peace. This is his contribution to the peace effort, he says.

"Using images people can relate to" and "creating pictures in people's minds" is important in storytelling, along with voice and gestures, Bland says. "Stories are a pretty powerful way to communicate with people."

Many of the stories he tells don't have to a profound meaning; they can just be enjoyable, he says.

His presentation in Twin Falls will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Valley Christian Church, 1708 Heyburn Ave. E.

Also during the evening, Debbie Cicle will sing several musical selections. Cicle recently has signed to tour with the Continental Singers.

'Home Safe' begins religious movie series

BUHL — "Home Safe," an evangelistic family movie, will be presented by the West End Ministerial Association this Sunday, Jan. 16, at 7 p.m. in the Buhl Junior High School auditorium.

The feature-length film will be the first in a monthly series of family movies sponsored by the association, which represents Christian churches in Buhl and Castleford.

The Rev. Benson Kern, the president of the West End Ministerial Association, says his organization wants to give the public "good, wholesome films to bring families together."

The movies will be "quality Christian films" that will appeal to people of all ages, he says. "Films that we hope will have a message, in addition to being entertaining."

"Home Safe," produced by Mark IV Pictures, teaches the value of loving discipline through adventure, suspense and comedy, according to Kern. It also explains how the sins of a father's disobedience that fall upon his children can be cast off.

The title of the movie represents a double meaning for the main character, a young boy named Jeff, who loves baseball and who, in the end, accepts Jesus as his savior and is therefore, "home safe."

"We're really hoping that these films will be a ministry as well as entertainment," Kern says.

The public is welcome, and an offering will be taken, he says.

Stock rally revives; modest gains

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK -- The stock market, aided by some favorable economic news, revived its new year rally Friday with a modest gain even though some big name issues lost steam toward the end.

American Telephone & Telegraph and IBM — both blue chip favorites — closed higher but finished below their best levels of the day.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 9.66 Thursday, tacked on 6.90 to 1,080.85 and finished the week ahead 4.78. The Dow, which flirted with the unprecedented 1,100 level Tuesday, had been up 10 points at mid-session.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.51 to an all-time high of [illegible] and the price of an average share increased 21 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 0.92 to 146.65. Advances topped declines 1,005-594 among the 1,976 issues traded at 2 p.m. MST.

Big Board volume rose to 86,480,000 shares from the 77,030,000 traded Thursday, but the pace slackened in the afternoon.

"It was almost like a holiday," said Trude Latimer, Evans & Co. vice president. "Traders saw the market was not going to surge, so they cashed in some chips and took off for the weekend."

American Telephone & Telegraph, which is in the process of a structural reorganization, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1⅞ to 67, just below its intra-day high of 67⅝.

A federal court in Chicago this week disallowed a $1.8 billion antitrust judgment MCI Communications has won against AT&T. The judgment must be reset.

IBM, which had been up to 99⅞ during the day, held on to gain ½ to 99¼ in heavy trading. There was speculation the computer giant will split its stock sometime next month.

John Smith, Fahnestock & Co. vice president, thinks "IBM stock could break through the 100 level soon and take the whole market with it."

That happened briefly Tuesday when the stock hit 100¼ and the Dow Jones average spurted above the 1,100 level for a short time.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 101,324,150 shares, up from the 90,599,620 traded Thursday.

The American Stock Exchange index rose 2.21 to 368.20 and the price of a share added eight cents. Advances topped declines 404-248 among the 826 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 9,171,700 shares compared with 7,861,050 traded Thursday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers NASDAQ index of OTC stocks gained 2.15 to an all-time high 245.63.

On the trading floor where AT&T headed the list, Rowan Co. was the second most active issue, up 1¼ to 13½. Other drilling stocks were strong, but analysts could find no particular reason.

Chrysler was the third most active issue, up ¼ to 17. Chrysler Thursday agreed to swap $490 million in new common stock for $1.1 billion in preferred stock held by lenders.

Itek soared 14¾ to 47¼ in heavy trading after Litton Industries agreed to buy the company for $240 million cash. Litton stock rose ⅜ to 57⅝.

Texas Instruments surged 10⅝ to 148¼ in active trading. The Wall Street Journal reported the company is set to unveil its Pegasus personal computer that mimics the IBM personal computer.

Control Data jumped 2⅛ to 43⅝. The company raised its dividend payout to 15 cents a share from 13¾ cents.

SCM Corp. surrendered 2⅞ to 30 after the company reported its second-quarter earnings plunged to 35 cents a share from 90 cents a year ago.

On the Amex, Dome Petroleum was the most active issue, off 3-16 to 3 9-16. Wang Laboratories class B followed, up ¾ to 33½. International Banknote was third, off ⅛ to 5.

Wickes, the largest employer in Grangeville, called 70 employees back to work this week and will ask another 70 to return next week.

Idaho Job Service spokesman John Purdy said if the workers are employed at least until spring, they can count on unemployment benefits if there is another layoff next winter.

BN sets tender deadline

HOUSTON (UPI) — Burlington Northern Inc., which is taking control of El Paso Co. by agreement, set a Feb. 7 deadline for shareholders to tender their stock to Burlington Northern.

Feb. 7 is both a proration deadline and an expiration date for the tender offer of $24 a share. Burlington Northern wants to buy only 21 million shares by public tender and if it is offered more will prorate purchases among stockholders.

El Paso has 49.5 million outstanding shares. Burlington already owned 537,000 when it began a takeover bid last Dec. 21 and will buy 4.1 million shares directly from the El Paso treasury to attain a 51 percent holding.

Factory production steadies

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Factory production held almost steady in December, suggesting the hard-hit industrial sector may soon get some relief, but it was down 8 percent for all of 1982.

The Federal Reserve Board said Friday industrial production dropped only 0.1 percent in December beyond routine seasonal changes, a rare improvement.

But the leveling off came too late to prevent the nation's factory output last year from falling back to its level of 1977, the Fed said.

The latest decrease was part of a three-year trend. Since the recession began in the late summer of 1981, the nation's factories, mines, oil wells and utility companies have slowed by 12.5 percent after failing to recover fully the output lost in the recession of 1980.

The auto industry, defense suppliers and aerospace manufacturers all showed improvement in December, yet did not offset the cutbacks under way elsewhere.

Factory production has fallen for 15 of the previous 17 months.

Aside from increases in February and July, the December factory report was the best during that period, perhaps signaling the recession has finally bottomed out, according to chief Commerce Department economist Robert Ortner.

December's mild decrease "may represent the trough of the recession," he said. "A turning point may be at hand in January."

The Fed's revisions of two previous months made the declines in October and November somewhat steeper. October's production cut was 1.1 percent instead of 0.8 percent. November saw a 0.7 percent setback instead of the previously reported 0.4 percent.

The 1982 decline was the most serious since production dropped 8.9 percent in 1975, another year hit by recession.

The positive signs in the report were led by an increase in the auto industry assembly rate to an annual 5.1 million unit pace, up 13 percent from November.

Oil and gas well drilling also improved.

The heavily weighted category of business equipment saw production drop 0.3 percent.

Ortner said there was a chance the index could go up when January's results are in since auto plants are continuing to increase production as sales remain relatively strong.

The Fed's industrial production index was 134.7 in December compared to a base of 100 in 1967.

The report also showed the output of utilities down for the entire year by 1.6 percent. December alone produced a full 1 percent drop.

The volatile category of mining, which includes oil production, dropped 17.3 percent in 1982 despite a 1.8 percent increase in December.

Manufacturing overall lost 5.7 percent of its output during 1982, 0.1 percent of it during the month.

Corn, soybeans among record crops

By LINDA WERFELMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department's final post-harvest report shows 1982 was a year of record-breaking production of many major farm crops, including corn and soybeans.

The department's final scheduled report on last year's crops said good weather throughout the growing season was partly responsible for the bumper crops.

Production increased despite government efforts to encourage farmer participation in voluntary crop reduction programs.

The department reported planted acreage of major crops dropped in 1982 to 363 million acres, about 2 million acres below 1981 levels. But in many cases, farmers harvested more from each acre, and production increased as a result, the department said.

The report said the corn crop totaled 8.4 billion bushels, 2 percent larger than the previous record, set in 1981. The final figure also was up slightly from the last official estimates offered in November.

National average per-acre yield was estimated at a record 114.8 bushels, compared to a November estimate of 114.4 bushels and the 1981 record of 109.8 bushels.

Soybean production totaled 2.28 billion bushels, up 14 percent from last year, the report said. Average yield was listed as 32.2 bushels per acre, an increase of 2.1 bushels from 1981.

An earlier document reported record wheat production last year of 2.8 billion bushels.

A separate report by the department forecast world grain production in the 1982-83 growing season at a record 1.66 billion tons, up slightly from the December estimate and 2 percent higher than last year's harvest. Of the total, the United States is expected to produce 339 million tons.

Statistics also showed an 841 million bushel sorghum crop, down 4 percent from 1981; a 617 million bushel oat crop, up 21 percent from 1981 and a record 522 million bushel barley crop, up 9 percent from 1981.

Total production of feed grains — corn, sorghum, oats and barley — was listed at a record 255 million metric tons, up 3 percent from last year.

The department reported a sharp drop in cotton production to 12 million bales, down 23 percent from the 1981 harvest, largely because of severe storms that damaged cotton fields in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico early in the growing season. The cotton harvest includes an estimated 11.9 million bales of upland cotton and 108,000 bales of American-Pima, the report said.

Tobacco production also dropped, down 5 percent from 1981 levels to 1.96 billion pounds, the department said. The overall decline was a result of the 14 percent decrease in flue-cured tobacco production, which was only partly offset by a 10 percent increase in the burley crop.

The report placed the rice crop at 154 million hundredweight, or 7 million metric tons, down 16 percent from the 1981 record.

Peanut production dropped 14 percent from 1981 to 3.44 billion pounds, but the sunflower crop increased 27 percent from 1981 to 5.69 billion pounds, the report said.

Potato production increased 3 percent from 1981 to 349 million hundredweight, or 15.8 million metric tons, the report said.

Meat output may dip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. meat output is expected to drop about 1 percent in 1983, largely because of indications hog farmers will cut back on production for the third straight year.

Beef production also is expected to drop slightly this year, the Agriculture Department said in its monthly estimates of supply and demand.

The supply and demand report noted hog producers have been reluctant to expand production, even though costs of feed are low. Commercial pork production is expected to total 13.4 billion pounds this year.

The report predicted 1983 beef production will total about 22.3 billion pounds.

Industrial homework reappears

Universal Press Syndicate

The Labor Department under the Reagan administration is backing off from this country's traditional ban on industrial homework in the apparel industry.

By so doing it is sending still another blunt signal that labor standards will be eroded in this era.

A case now before the U.S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia underlines this threat. The lawsuit, brought by 11 plaintiffs — including the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union and two manufacturers' groups — challenges the decision to raise the ban on industrial homework in the knitted outerwear industry that became effective in November, 1981.

Industrial homework in the clothing industry is an evil that was banned 40 years ago, and a succession of secretaries of labor and wage-hour administrators never recommended a change until 1980. Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan used the occasion of political pressure from a small, vocal group of knitters in Vermont and their senators to propose lifting the ban in seven industries. (They are: women's apparel, jewelry manufacturing, knitted outerwear, gloves and mittens, button and buckle manufacturing, handkerchief manufacturing and embroideries.)

In the process, the Labor Department under Donovan displayed a stunning lack of understanding why the prohibition existed in the first place.

The practice occurs in industries that are not highly technological and use portable equipment and semi-skilled workers. Employers distribute work to employees at home and typically pay on a piece-rate basis. Legions of state and federal officials have made clear that it is impossible to enforce minimum-wage laws, health and safety standards, child labor laws and other regulations to prevent exploitation. Public hearings held in April, 1981, showed again that industrial homework remains a horrible problem.

One woman testified anonymously that she was paid $1.30 to make a dress, and it took two to three hours to sew it. Her earnings: a range of 43 cents to 65 cents per hour against the then-legal minimum wage of $3.35 an hour.

Lifting the ban occurs at a time when industrial homework is known to be on the upswing in Miami, Los Angeles, New York and Chicago. Already enforcement is lax, still another casualty of tight budgets and personnel cutbacks and is limited to a complaints-made basis.

Many industrial homeworkers are poorly educated. Many, also, are undocumented aliens too terrified to complain; the huge majority are women.

Bans on industrial homework exist in 18 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. With the variations among state laws and the fact that 32 states have no laws banning it plus the fact that these are highly portable industries, the lifting of the ban in even one industry that employs roughly 80,000 workers is a dangerous sign.

In its unbelievable "wisdom," the Labor Department conducted no studies of the impact of lifting the ban. Incredibly, the department argued that this would create more jobs — a tired argument that should have been laid to rest 40 years ago. Only if you approve of sweatshops and 19th-century labor practices would the job argument make "sense."

Both manufacturers and organized labor loudly opposed this idea. Owners operate on such a wafer-thin margin and competition is so ferocious that they economize wherever they can. And they argued that those who adhere to factory standards would lose that edge and be forced to close.

Lifting the ban has other chilling consequences, particularly as the practice spreads — and it will. Money is channeled into the underground economy, since employers pay no Social Security, withhold no taxes, pay no benefits. Workers receive nothing but their pittance, don't declare this income, pay no taxes. The government loses money on the "jobs" created.

The action is consistent with the Labor Department's depressing assault on other time-honored regulations. It's no friend to workers in this era.

Clinching irony: Some months ago, fashionable first lady Nancy Reagan's favorite designer, Adolfo, was found to have contracted work to a company that employed industrial homeworkers to sew his creations. Source for this information: ILGWU General Counsel Max Zimny.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat, corn, oats and soybeans were higher at the close Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.
Wheat was up ¼ to 2½ cents; corn up 2¼ to 3½; oats up 1 to 1½; and soybeans up 3½ to 5½ cents.
A late rally, led by soybeans, enabled grain and soybean futures to settle higher on the day. Profit-taking eroded some of the gains, however.
March soybeans hit the $6 per bushel level and settled at $5.98½.
Aggressive professional buying, along with scattered commission house and commercial demand, contributed to the advances, floor sources said.
Gold and T-bonds were higher while the dollar was mixed.
The USDA's final crop production report, released late Thursday, was considered bearish for corn and neutral for soybeans, grain analysts said.
The USDA estimated corn production at 8.39 billion bushels and soybeans at 2.27 billion bushels.

Money supply is right on target

NEW YORK (UPI) -- The Federal Reserve Friday reported the measure of the nation's money supply known as M2 rose $14.1 billion in December and put money growth directly on the Fed's target.

Analysts said the figures give the Fed, which has been trying to encourage lower rates to facilitate economic recovery, breathing room to continue its credit easing policy.

The narrower measure of the money supply known as M1 fell $300 million in the latest week, although the Fed no longer pays attention to M1 because of distortions created by the new bank money market accounts introduced last month.

The Fed also estimated that deposits in the new money accounts at banks and savings institutions swelled to $111 billion from $87 billion the previous week.

David M. Jones, economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., said M2 "came in slightly below our own estimates and, more important, came in right on the Fed's target for the fourth quarter."

"All in all, the numbers were closer to target than many had expected," he said. "That should give the Fed a little bit of breathing room. There was growing concern that Fed policy had been too expansionary and a fear that the Fed might have to halt its easing move or risk reigniting inflation."

Jones said he expected the Fed's closely watched discount rate that it charges member banks for loans to be cut a half-point to 8 percent.

The growth in the bank's new money market accounts to $111 billion in less than one month exceeded predictions by many in the industry that the accounts would attract a total $100 billion by the end of the first year.

The accounts were designed to compete with the popular Wall Street money funds, from which $27 billion has flowed out since the bank accounts were introduced Dec. 14.

M1, comprised of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts or money that is available for immediate spending was a seasonally adjusted average of $477.8 billion in the week ended Jan. 5 compared with $478.1 billion the previous week.

In the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged a 16 percent rate of gain.

M2, which is comprised of M1 plus passbook savings accounts and consumer money market funds, averaged $2.0015 trillion in December, up from $1.9874 trillion in November.

The Fed, which usually reports on commercial and industrial loans at the nation's major banks on Friday, said the figures would be delayed until Monday because of difficulties in compiling the statistics.

However, commercial and industrial loans at major New York City banks rose $1.08 billion in the latest week, compared with a drop of $278 million the previous week.

Key interest rates fell in the banking week ended Wednesday. The federal funds rate averaged 8.42 percent, down sharply from 10.21 percent a week earlier.

The rate on three-month Treasury bills eased to 7.76 from 7.97 percent. The rate on three-month certificates of deposit averaged 8.30 percent, down from 8.60 percent the week before.

Some OPEC members to back price system

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (UPI) -- Saudi Arabia and other key Persian Gulf oil producers will support OPEC prices despite pressure of a worldwide oil glut, the United Arab Emirates oil minister said Friday.

"We think the oil market crisis should be solved through limiting production levels and not through reducing prices," Mana said al Otaiba told the official Emirates News Agency WAM on the eve of a two-day meeting in Bahrain of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council.

Otaiba, who often reflects the positions of influential Saudi oil minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said the UAE was "keen on defending the current prices (based on) $34 a barrel for the Saudi light crude."

The GCC was formed by Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates in May 1981. Its members have reportedly been under tremendous pressure recently to cut prices to get a better share of the shrinking world oil market.

Otaiba denied Oman was considering reducing its prices by up to $2 a barrel to market its production, which has been increased recently by 4,000 to 300,000 barrel per day.

"To my knowledge, Oman will not reduce its prices," said Otaiba, who has just returned from a visit and talks with Sultan Qabous of Oman.

Four of the Gulf producers -- Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the UAE and Qatar -- are members of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and have been complaining they are almost alone in defending OPEC prices.

Otaiba said the GCC oil ministers, meeting Saturday and Sunday in the tiny island state of Bahrain in the Persian Gulf, will discuss the oil market situation in the light of OPEC's meeting in Vienna Dec. 19.

Stressing there was no "contradiction" between the GCC and OPEC meetings, Otaiba said, "The GCC ministers do not discuss matters related to OPEC ... we only exchange views and review the developments that occur between the two meetings."

Last fall the GCC hinted it would raise its production and slash prices if errant OPEC members, such as Iran, Libya and Venezuela, did not stop overproducing their oil and offering illegal price discounts.

At their Vienna meeting, OPEC oil ministers agreed to defend the official base price of $34 per barrel, but failed to distribute individual quotas within the group's production ceiling of 18.5 million barrels per day.

Their failure has created a "free-for-all" situation, with each member left to decide its own production level for 1983.

Otaiba is expected to chair a meeting of OPEC's four-nation market monitoring committee in Jakarta, Indonesia Feb. 3 and 4. There are reports the watchdog group, which also includes the oil ministers of Indonesia, Venezuela and Algeria, might call for a full ministerial emergency meeting in March.

CSI takes first step — Ricks falls

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

REXBURG — Roll the calendar back one year because College of Southern Idaho has put itself in the same position — needing to win them all to clinch the regional tournament.

The Eagles, getting clutch free-throw shooting from Phil Rohr and Chuck Glovick, plus two driving shots by Dewey Haley, rallied from 10 points behind to beat third-ranked Ricks College 63-60 Friday night.

It was the third straight victory for Coach Dave Campbell on the Hart Fieldhouse floor and it came before the largest all-time Ricks crowd. The fieldhouse includes an auxiliary gym and that contained several hundred people who watched the game via the public address system and television. The basketball area seats 4,300.

The game was a typical "every-thing on the line" game that left Campbell wringing wet with perspiration and Ricks skipper Gary Gardner virtually speechless.

Gardner had several moments on the floor as he rolled and fell, depending on the situations.

"This is what it is all about," exulted Gerald Kennedy in the dressing room afterwards. "Now they have to come to our house."

Campbell had about 20 seconds at the end of the game to collect himself. "It's the same old thing. We have to win them all and we have to play them all one at a time. One wrong step and we're back in the soup."

What Campbell meant was that under regional rules, should CSI and Ricks tie in the regular season standings, Ricks would get the home court in the regionals. That usually is tantamount to winning the event.

CSI couldn't count this victory until Glovick hit a slam dunk off a fast break with 11 seconds left to give CSI its biggest lead at 63-56.

Paul Gardner hit for Ricks with seven seconds to play and Ricks burned its last time out.

On the inbounds play, CSI simply passed the ball to Ricks' Mark Matthews, yielding him a slam dunk with four seconds, but no way to stop the clock.

Ricks hit nine of its first 10 shots from the floor, tailing in the one miss.

Just 10:30 into the game, the Vikings owned a 25-15 lead as CSI was unable to match that nearly-per'vet shooting percentage. But over the next five minutes, Ricks managed just two free throws and CSI, with Rohr hitting six points, closed to within two at 27-25.

It was 31-29 Ricks at the half.

After three ties started the second half, Ricks started moving away as Jeff Anderson and Ken Cragun hit field goals.

Facing a seven-point deficit, CSI started back on a short jumper by Kennedy and two Glovick free throws.

The Eagles took the lead with just over six minutes left on Rohr's jumper.

At that point, the game disintegrated into a lot of turnovers, spread offenses and missed opportunities.

CSI tried the spread first with 5:22 remaining, but turned the ball over.

Ricks didn't take any better care of it and CSI moved to a four-point lead when Haley hit a fallaway jumper at the end of a drive with 3:28 to play.

Rohr and Haley hit two free throws each to offset field goals by Tom Gneiting and Anderson.

Anderson's second field goal in that span closed the gap to 55-54 with 2:19 left.

After two scoreless possessions for each team, CSI took a two-point lead when Rohr hit one of two free throws.

Ricks then turned the ball over with 48 seconds to play and Haley went the length of the court to score on an tough release shot.

After a Ricks miss, Haley recovered a loose ball in the corner and let fly with a full-court pass to Glovick for the game-clinching dunk.

Cambell said the win was basically a team effort, noting "Our young kids had to come through when Gerald and John Irby got into foul trouble and they did. We just hung in against them when they were having that scoring surge and at halftime we talked about conditioning. I think that had a lot to do with the win. I felt Ricks got more tired late in the game than we did.

"I started feeling that we could win the game when we got the lead with about five minutes to go and they had to chase us. I knew they were going to hurry on offense after that too.

"They hurt us on the offensive boards through the first 30 minutes but I though late in the game we did a lot better job and got all of the critical rebounds."

Campbell said Ricks had presented all the problems he had feared, especially the height advantage in the guard line. With Ron Beach and Haley both in the six-foot area, CSI had trouble containing the 6-6 Anderson and 6-4 Brad Gardner in a man defense.

"Early in the game they posted Gardner and Anderson up and hurt us with both of them getting two field goals apiece," Campbell said. "We had to change our defenses a lot to keep them from using that all night."

Skyline effort not enough

Bruins keep lead with OT win

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After fighting like cornered rats all evening, the Skyline Grizzlies ended up screaming like stuck pigs as they lost to the Twin Falls Bruins in overtime Friday, 60-52.

Skyline, which entered the contest with a six-game losing streak and apparent disadvantages in height and talent, fell behind 12-1 but never ceased battling. The Grizzlies were rewarded for their relentlessness, finally tying the score and even moving twice to two-point leads early in the fourth period.

"They always play that way. I think Skyline is in the same class as Minico when it comes to character," Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia said. "They always play hard."

Perhaps the Grizzlies played too hard. Several times their passing-game offense produced offensive fouls from illegal screens instead of points. Skyline committed 21 fouls overall, while Twin Falls was whistled for just eight. The disparity incensed Skyline Coach Jim Lewis (who drew a fourth-quarter technical foul for his invective), his players and the handful of Grizzly fans.

Though Lewis' eruptions during the game would have rivaled Mt. St. Helens, he managed to speak calmly afterward, merely asking for justice instead of crying for it.

"Our kids deserved at least a chance to win," Lewis said, implying that the imbalance of fouls destroyed such chances. "They played hard enough."

Astorquia didn't see anything abnormal about the foul calls. "Skyline uses moving picks in their passing game; I don't think they're legal picks," he said. "And I think Skyline's going to be in foul trouble all year because they're short . . . when you have a shorter team, you're going to get more fouls."

Having spoken emphatically all night, Lewis was also earnest in his praise for the Bruins, who won their seventh straight game and stand 9-1 overall, 5-0 in the Gem State Conference. "Twin Falls showed they're the top team in the league," he said. "They played when they had to."

The Bruins had to play in overtime, and play they did. After missing all 12 free throws they attempted during regulation, the Bruins made eight of 10 in the extra session and prevented Skyline from scoring until matters had been decided.

Twin Falls successfully opened the overtime with a "three-point play" involving its two top scorers. First, Andy Toolson broke the 48-48 regulation tie by hitting the Bruins' first free throw with 2:38 left in overtime. Toolson missed the second shot, but Greg Snow grabbed the rebound and sank a turn-around jumper for a 51-48 Twin Falls lead. Toolson (eight-for-11 from the field) and Snow (10-of-12) each finished with 20 points.

After a Skyline turnover, Oscar Salinas coaxed a foul and converted both ends of a one-and-one, expanding Twin Falls' advantage to five with 1:43 left. The Grizzlies then missed a shot and failed to get the rebound under considerable Bruin pressure, inciting Lewis, who hollered something nasty at a referee and collected the technical with 1:27 to go.

That gave the Bruins two free throws, Toolson hitting one for a 54-48 Bruin cushion. Twin Falls kept possession, and with 57 seconds left Salinas found an opening between the desperately scrambling Grizzly defenders and passed to Toolson underneath for a layin and an eight-point lead. Mike Rice and Toolson, each made both ends of one-and-ones in the closing seconds, finishing the Bruins'

McNeil downplays duel with Allen

By CLARK JUDGE
The Baltimore Evening Sun

The New York Jets' Freeman McNeil went out of his way this week to defuse any running battle between himself and the Raiders' Marcus Allen.

"It would be a battle if I were a defensive back trying to stop him or he was a defensive back trying to stop me," McNeil said on the eve of today's National Football League second-round playoff game in Los Angeles. "I'm not going out Saturday to compete against him, to see who can get more yards or more touchdowns. There's no room for that — this isn't an individual game."

OK, Freeman, we know it takes 22 players to play the game, all for one and one for all and all that, but the tangle is too obvious to ignore. McNeil: UCLA, running back, Jets' first-round pick in 1981, NFL's leading rusher in 1982; Allen: USC, running back, Raiders' first-round pick in 1982, offensive rookie of the year, NFL's leading scorer.

"There's no one-on-one rivalry between me and Freeman," Allen said. "No one individual is going to win a ballgame."

The last time these two guys met, in the fall of 1980, McNeil caught a deflected pass in the last two minutes and ran 58 yards for the touchdown that gave UCLA a 20-17 victory over Allen's USC club.

McNeil carried 24 times that day for 111 yards; Allen carried 37 times for 72 yards.

Allen's partner in the backfield of this season's all-pro team: McNeil.

"They are very similar," Jets coach Walt Michaels said. "The main difference, I guess, is that Freeman is in his second year."

And that Freeman McNeil can beat the Bengals, last week; he ran for 202 yards against a Cincinnati team that held Allen to zero.

The matchups:

TODAY

N.Y. Jets vs. L.A. Raiders
Time: 2 p.m. MST
Records: New York, 7-3; Los Angeles, 9-1.
Favorite: Raiders by 3½.
Analysis: McNeil vs. Allen, Richard Todd vs. Jim Plunkett, Sack Exchange vs. Pride and Poise. This may be best of the weekend's games. Jets coming off emotionally charged upset of Cincinnati, while Raiders routinely dispatched Cleveland. Asking Jets to do it twice in a row may be too much. Jets probably the league's most talented club, Raiders the most consistent. Raiders showed soft underbelly last weekend, vulnerability to deep pass. Jets have outstanding long ball threats in Wes Walker and Lam Jones. Raiders' pass rush ferocious with outstanding linebackers and will be test for terrific front line of Jets.

Minnesota at Washington
Time: 10:30 a.m. MST
Records: Minnesota, 6-4; Washington, 9-1.
Favorite: Washington by 6 points.
Analysis: Both clubs on rolls. Vikes coming off solid wins over Dallas and Atlanta. Redskins have won 12 of last 13, and have outscored opponents 59-7 in last two games. If it comes down to kickers, Redskins got it in bag. Mark Moseley has range and accuracy over Vikes' Rick Danmeier. Word out of Great White North is Vikes are confident, carrying on as if they sense an upset. However, Vikes haven't played outdoors in last five games and only kickers practiced this week in the wilds. "The field won't be frozen," scoffs Coach Bud Grant. "Besides, they haven't forgotten how to play outdoors." Redskin offense finally

Games on TV

TWIN FALLS — All four National Football League playoff games can be viewed by local TV viewers this weekend.

A KMVT spokesman said all four games will be carried on Channel 11 (Channel 12 for cable viewers).

Today's Minnesota at Washington game starts at 10:30 a.m. while the New York Jets at Los Angeles Raiders game will start at 2 p.m.

Sunday's San Diego at Miami encounter is slated for 10:30 a.m. with the Green Bay at Dallas clash set for 2 p.m.

Documentary will raise questions

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A county supervisor asked the Justice Department Friday to investigate charges that Los Angeles Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom may have been murdered three years ago in Florida and did not accidentally drown.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn also called on Attorney General William French Smith to look into implications that organized crime figures had fixed a dozen NFL games between 1968 and 1970.

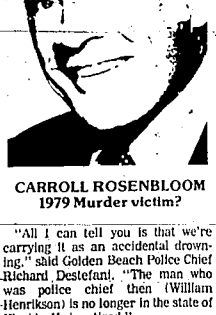
Both allegations were made in an upcoming Public Broadcasting Service documentary about the NFL that was screened for reporters in New York this week. The movie, titled "An Unauthorized History of the NFL," is scheduled for national airing Monday night.

Raymond Tanguay, a Canadian tourist, told the program's producers he responded to Rosenbloom's cries for help in April 1979 and saw a black object, apparently a diver in a wet suit, near Rosenbloom's body.

The documentary implies Rosenbloom was held under water by someone in a wet suit until he drowned.

Tanguay said in an interview that as he drew closer to the surf, he saw two men carrying Rosenbloom's body out of the surf and was told to get away.

Florida authorites said Friday they had no intention of reopening the drowning case.



CARROLL ROSENBLOOM
1979 Murder victim?

"All I can tell you is that we're carrying it as an accidental drowning," said Golden Beach Police Chief Richard Destefani. "The man who was police chief then (William Henrikson) is no longer in the state of Florida. He is retired."

Henrikson, now director of security for a business in the South, was contacted Friday by the Brattleboro, Vt., Reformer and said he was certain the death was accidental.

"There were no injuries and no blood on the body," Henrikson, a former deputy sheriff in the Brattleboro area, told the newspaper.

Henrikson said he was amazed at what Tanguay had told PBS.

"His version is totally incorrect. I can't explain his version," Henrikson said.

Hahn said the County Grand Jury should also investigate Rosenbloom's death and the possibility of organized crime's infiltration into professional football — including charges of ticket scalping at the 1980 Super Bowl in Los Angeles.

"There is growing public concern over the untimely death of Carroll Rosenbloom," Hahn said in a telegram to Smith.

"A special session of the federal grand jury should be convened in Florida to investigate media reports that he was murdered by organized crime.

"It has also been reported that organized crime has been fixing professional football games. The sports fans of America must be guaranteed that the final scores of NFL games are arrived at on the field and not in some back office of organized crime."

A spokesman for the NFL said the league would reserve comment on the game-fixing and ticket-scalping charges until league officials had a chance to view the documentary.

Joe Brown, an NFL spokesman, said although the media had seen the documentary, producers had refused to let league officials see the show until it airs Monday night.

Jerome falls to Rigby in double overtime

RIGBY — Preston Barry hit three of four free throws in the last two minutes of the second overtime to lift the Rigby Trojans past the Jerome Tigers 57-54 in A-2 action Friday night.

It was expected to be a barnburner from the start as the Tigers were ranked No. 1 and the Trojans No. 2 statewide in A-2.

Trent Shippen, who led all scorers in the game with 28 points, including a fine 14-of-16 from the charity stripe, helped the Trojans considerably early in the second half as he hit two quick field goals at the top of the third quarter, one of which a three-point play resulted, giving the Trojans a comfortable 31-24 advantage.

Jerome, however, bounced back with three conversions from the field, two by Kevin Hulsey, to pull within one of the Trojans midway through the period. Rigby pulled ahead once again at 35-33, but Bob Stone hit two from the foul line to tie the game at 35 apiece.

The Tigers enjoyed a 41-38 lead, early in the second half, but following a semi-successful charity attempt by Shippen which put the Trojans within two points of the Tigers and a steal by junior Troy Shippen in which a cripple resulted, the Trojans once again tied the game at 49.

Jerome took their biggest lead of the second half with 2:46 remaining at 46-42, but Rigby quickly tied the game on a set of free throws by Shippen. Gary Hulsey put the Tigers on top again 48-46, but Mike Radford converted to tie the game at 48 at the end of regulation.

The first overtime period proved a bit stale as both teams tried to stall for the best shot possible and both team managed only two points as the game was tied at 50 despite a last second tip-in by Gary Hulsey which was called no good.

The Trojans capitalized on Jerome's foul trouble in the second overtime period, quickly gaining a 54-50 cushion. Turnovers by Jerome proved detrimental in the remaining seconds as Berry was sent to the line three times.

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs, enjoying their best percentage-shooting night of the year, defeated the Glenns Ferry Pilots 66-46 Friday night in a Canyon Conference matchup.

Shooting 50 percent from the floor and 67 percent from the line, the Bulldogs took a 32-16 lead at the half, never relinquishing the lead afterward in the rough-and-tumble game which netted 50 total fouls.

Earl Molyneux topped all scorers by putting in 21 points and grabbing 14 rebounds, three of which resulted in baskets.

The win puts Kimberly's conference record at 5-1 with an 8-1 overall record. Glenns Ferry's conference tally drops to 2-3 as their total record evens out at 5-5.

HAZELTON — Gooding, en route to its highest point total of the season, flew past Valley 71-45 in Canyon Conference play Friday night.

The Senators mounted a 19-10 first-period lead, stretching it to 39-17 at the half. The visitors game out gunning in the third period for 19 more, absorbing a 13-16 deficit in the final eight minutes.

Gooding's victory, which puts it at 4-5 overall and 2-1 in the league, saw the Senators surpass their previous high by seven points. Valley fell to 4-5 overall and 1-3 in the Canyon.

"Gooding has the best personnel we've faced this year," said Valley Coach Scott Tingey. "I think if they decide what they wanted to do, they could do anything they wanted. They certainly did that tonight."

High for Gooding was 6-foot-8 Ken Anderson, with 21, while Leon Anderson, at 6-foot-6, was next with 17.

Cas'ford 64, R. River 36

CASTLEFORD — Three Castleford players scored in double figures to thrust the Wolves past Raft River 64-36 Friday night.

The conference victory saw forward Alan Sample lead all on the floor with 15, while Tracy Vulgamore and Rick Vuik added 14 and 13 points respectively.

Castleford leaped to a 17-4 first quarter lead, thanks mainly to Vuik's outside shooting, in which the senior center hit seven of nine in the first half. Leading 37-14 at the half, the lead widened by two in the third period, then by three more in the fourth.

Castleford Coach Kelly Murphey disagreed the game was decided in the early going.

"Raft River is a big and strong team," he said, "but they were very cold tonight. They just couldn't hit them, that and turnovers were a factor."

In the preliminary Castleford's junior varsity whetted the home fans' appetite for victory by winning 61-27.

Declo 70, Wendell 66

DECLO — Declo put three players in double figures and had another with nine points to secure a 70-66 win over Wendell in Canyon Conference boys play Friday night.

The Hornets, now 6-3 overall and 2-3 in the Canyon, led the entire contest. Wendell was within three points at halftime, but Declo moved out to a 70-60 lead with one minute left before a few turnovers allowed the visiting Trojans to narrow the final gap.

Lair Garner led Declo with 17 while Denny Smyre added 14 from his guard spot. Curtis Hansel had 10 and Richard Hunsaker had 14. Terry Hodgekiss scored nine points and led Declo's 49-40 rebound edge with 13. Hanzel added nine boards.

Wendell, now 3-4 overall and 2-2 in the conference, was paced by Mitch Swanson's 22 points.

Shoshone 59, Filer 51

FILER — A bruising inside game and a bruised Filer player spelled disaster for the Filer Wildcats, as they lost to a tall Shoshone club, 59-51.

Minus the services of their senior center, who was out with an ankle injury, Filer witnessed the inside scoring of 6-foot-6 Kim Duffin, who was high for Shoshone with 19. Filer's Ben Sackett, a Wildcat starting guard, was also lost to injury, but his came midway in the game after he charged to the hoop. He didn't return the second half, which, in Filer assistant Coach Kevin Durfee's opinion, was the final straw.

"It was really the turning point," said Durfee, who added the limping player to the lockerroom. "Before that he earned five outside shots. But I'd also like to say Shoshone's defense was one of the toughest we've seen. They're tough."

Just how tough was proven in the third period as the visitors spread the halftime margin to a 13-point lead. With the pressure on in the final period, Filer missed five attempts at the line, while Shoshone connected on all eight of theirs.

Shoshone is now 6-4, while Filer drops to 4-5.

In junior varsity play, Filer won 58-36, with Brad Nowak leading in the winning effort with 15.

Oakley 65, Murtaugh 52

OAKLEY — Rick Adams limited Murtaugh's Roy Nebeker to just 13 points, including only three after the first quarter, as Oakley downed the top-ranked Red Devils 65-52 Friday night.

The loss was the second of the week for Murtaugh and will probably drop Jim Anderson's squad in next week's United Press International ratings.

Adams guarded Nebeker man-to-man. Nebeker scored 10 points in a 23-23 first quarter before Adams worked his magic over the last 24 minutes.

"I think they just ran out of gas before we did," Oakley Coach Neal Wyatt said. "We both have been bugged by the flu bug."

Oakley's big quarters were the second and third as it outscored Murtaugh 33-17 during the 16 minutes.

Gary Morrison had 18 for the Hornets, but sophomore Cory Woodhouse and Mike Martin each had 17 points. Adams, usually Oakley's top scorer, had 11 points.

Murtaugh dropped to 2-2 in the Magic Valley Conference and 8-3 for the season while Oakley moved to 7-4 overall and 2-1 in the league.

IDAHO FALLS — The Idaho Falls Tigers came out shooting Friday night and scored 41 points in the first half of play to take a 75-68 decision over Gem State Conference opponent Minico.

Behind Mark Brown's game-leading 21 points, the Spartans took the lead for the first time in the third quarter with the lead see-sawing from that point on.

Molding the way for the Tigers was Rick Rohweder with 19 points despite fouling out. Johnny Miller and Brad Croft each had 16 for Minico.

The loss drops Minico's season record to 5-6 with a 3-3 conference record as they meet the Blackfoot Broncos Wednesday in Blackfoot.

The Northside Conference win saw the visitors make double figures in all periods, including a 21-9 drubbing in the final eight minutes. A total of six players hit buckets for Camas, with four of them earning double figures.

Hag'man 64, Hansen 45

HAGERMAN — "We really played a team ballgame, both offensively and defensively," was Hagerman Coach Skip Pauls' definition of the 64-45 Pirate win over the Hansen Huskies Friday night in Magic Valley Conference play.

Coming off Tuesday night's 46-43 upset of Murtaugh, the Pirates began the game well defensively, highlighted by 15 rebounds from Rick Claxton and three steals by Mark Jones. The Huskies were held to a mere 11 points in the first half of play.

Hagerman's Brady Nieder led all scorers with 18 points and also pulled down 12 rebounds. Claxton's 17 and Brett Arriaga's 15 also helped the Pirates, while Steve Elman put in 16 points in a losing cause for the Huskies. Arriaga also had 16 assists.

scoring and dropping Skyline to 3-8 overall and 2-4 in the conference.

The previous time Rice and Toolson scored consecutively came in the fourth period. With the score tied 44-44, Rice hit a jumper at the free-throw line and Toolson canned a 17-footer with 1:52 left to give Twin Falls a 48-44 edge.

But Evan Nelson hit a 12-footer with 1:33 to go, bringing Skyline within two. Then, with the Bruins executing their delay offense poorly — "We weren't cutting or going to the basket at all," Astorquia said later — Nelson deftly intercepted a pass and sank the layin with 1:06 left that forced overtime.

Toolson, Snow and Bobby Jones each scored four points to help build the Bruins' early 12-1 lead. This didn't keep Skyline from running its methodical offense and slowly drawing even. By quarter's end, the Bruins led just 16-9. By halftime, the difference was just 26-23. Twin Falls moved to a 38-28 lead midway through the third period, but an eight-point Skyline burst, climaxed by Nelson's fast-break layin with 6:02 remaining in regulation, forged a 40-40 tie.

Twin Falls' junior varsity won the preliminary, 50-40.

Ricks avenges earlier loss to CSI; Oakley continues string

REXBURG -- Ricks College used the three-way parlay to knock off College of Southern Idaho 83-73 in women's basketball action Friday night.

Quickness, free throws and turnovers -- about in that order proved the difference as the Vikings won the opening game in the race for Region 18 playoff berths. The victory avenged a loss to CSI on the Ricks court in the Ricks Holiday Invitational last month.

The major difference in the game was the half-step Ricks had seemingly at every position, but it was Ricks' inside quickness that was particularly devastating to CSI.

Liecia Holdaway and Marylin Harmer broke away almost at will for uncontested inside shots. Holdaway's single move earned her 16 points she simply took a pass, took the ball to the floor and looked left then swung right for layins when the CSI defenders consistently took the head fake. Harmer collected 15 points, hitting a couple off the wing.

Ricks generally held the lead through the first half, moving ahead by 10 midway through the period. Cass Herbst hit two cripples off steals and Jeannie Morgan added a follow shot to pull the Eagles within one. But over the last five minutes, Ricks stretched back in front, 47-40.

In the second half, Ricks again took a pair of 10-point leads in the first six minutes. But with 10:21 to play Jenise VanderVegt, Herbst and Belinda Fischer picked up two points each to again reduce the deficit to two. The game remained there on a basket trade before Barbara Bedwell hit two straight field goals and Viki Harvey and Harmer added two points each that took Ricks to an 11-point advantage. The Vikings coasted in from there.

HAGERMAN — Hagerman used balanced scoring to defeat Hansen 48-36 in Magic Valley Conference girls play Friday night.

As usual, Kristin McFadden paced Hagerman with 15 points, but it was the scoring of Janine Hulme and Audra Wagner that powered the Pirates.

"They (Murtaugh) stuffed Kristin down low, so Janine and Audra, who play a stacked post on the opposite side of Kristin, went to the basket real well and scored."

Bliss jumped to a 10-6 lead in the first quarter, but Carey cut the deficit to two points as Bliss went on top 17-15 at halftime.

Carey however, blew it open in the second half, outscoring the Bears 10-2 in the third quarter and 13-6 in the fourth to take its eighth victory overall this season against six losses.

Dietrich 54, Camas 32

DIETRICH -- A hot-and-cold scoring attack by Dietrich proved just what the home crowd needed to see as the Blue Devils defeated Camas County's girls 54-32 Friday.

The first game of the double header saw senior Glenda Fowers lead Dietrich with 24 points, her season best. Fowers hit eight of 11 free throws, in addition to eight from the field.

"We were pressing them, which helped a lot," commented Dietrich Coach Ben Stroud. "That type of defensive pressure meant a lot of turnovers."

Oakley 48, Murtaugh 33

OAKLEY — Leslie Bedke sparked a third-quarter rally which proved enough to lift the Oakley Hornets past the Murtaugh Red Devils 48-33 Friday night.

Bedke hit four consecutive from the field at the top of the third quarter to take his place. Dutton is hurting with a a deep bruise of his right thigh, the same injury that kept him out of the playoff game with San Francisco last year. Bad omen? Few gave the 49ers a chance there. If Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey doesn't spend most of day on his back, Pack has chance. He'll need all the help he can get from sometimes porous front line and wide receivers John Jefferson and James Lofton. Cowboys have won five of last six playoff games at Dallas and are 78-17 in Texas Stadium.

Last time Chargers stopped by Orange Bowl, they pulled out memorable 41-38 overtime victory. Don't think Dolphins have forgotten. Miami quarterback David Woodley finally showed last weekend he could pass something besides butter, completing 16-of-19 for 246 yards. Boise takes early lead

TWIN FALLS -- The Boise YFCA Swimming Team, behind triple first-place performances by Lori Rea and Ken Page, took the team lead Friday night in the Junior Olympics short course meet being hosted by the Magic Valley Swim Club.

Rea and Page both took first in three events -- the 500-yard freestyle, 400-yard intermediate medley and 1,650-yard freestyle to pace Boise to 109 points. Rea swims in the 15-18 girls division while Page is in the 15-18 boys division.

Pocatello is in second place with 87 points while the host team scored 29 points in the early portion of the three-day meet held at the Magic Valley YFCA. Blackfoot was the only other team to score, netting seven points.

Kris Erwin, a 13-14 girls competitor for Boise, took first in both the 500 freestyle and 400 IM to account for 14 of her team's points.

Pocatello's showing was paced by Andrew Cukurs, a 13-14 swimmer who also won first place in the same three events.

Leading Magic Valley's showing were sisters Pam and Cindy O'Dell and Tim Shaub. Pam recorded second in both the 500 freestyle and 400 Im in the 13-14 girls division while Cindy took fourth place in both events in the 15-18 girls division. Shaub was fourth in the 15-18 boys 400 IM and finished fifth in the 500 free.

The meet resumes today at 9 a.m. with the 200-yard freestyle relay and will continue until about 4:30 p.m. Sunday's action will run from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. when the team titles, individual ribbons and "McDonald's Spirit Award" will be presented. Medical study blasts boxing

CHICAGO (UPI) — Boxing is so harmful to the human brain that it should not be sanctioned by any civilized society, a group of doctors says.

"Boxing is the only sport in which the intent is to inflict physical injury," Dr. Ronald J. Ross said in the current Journal of the American Medical Association. "Our data show that boxers with even a moderate number of bouts may suffer cerebral atrophy."

The AMA has issued a resolution noting brain damage — dementia, memory loss, slurred speech, tremor and abnormal gait — is seen in perhaps 15 percent of professional boxers.

Symptoms may become progressively worse after a career is over.

"Boxing is a dangerous sport and can result in death or long-term brain injury," the AMA said. "To reduce this risk, central administrative regulations and strict medical supervision should be required for the sport of boxing."

In the past three years, Ross and colleagues examined 40 ex-boxers to determine the effects of boxing in regard to their neurological status and the computed tomographic — CT — appearance of the brain.

'Boxing, as a throwback to uncivilized man, should not be sanctioned by any civilized society.' —Dr. George Lundberg

"Our data support the hypothesis that the more one boxes, the more likely he is to have evidence of cerebral atrophy on CT scan as well as an abnormal EEG," the doctors said. "The significance of our data is particularly striking in view of the fact that we actually had few professional fighters who had numerous bouts."

The doctors suggested CT scans and EEG examinations should be considered part of a regular neurological examination for active boxers.

"Numbers of studies, especially from the British and European literature, have attested to the neurological injury sustained by boxers," they said. "Our study thus supports the numerous others in the literature showing that boxing is deleterious to the human brain."

The recent death of Korean boxer Duk Koo Kim prompted renewed criticism of the sport.

"The principal purpose of a boxing match is for one opponent to render the other injured, defenseless, incapacitated, unconscious," Dr. George D. Lundberg wrote in a JAMA editorial. "Some have argued that boxing has a redeeming social value in that it allows a few disadvantaged or minority individuals an opportunity to rise to spectacular wealth and fame.

"This does occur, but at what price? The price in this country includes chronic brain damage for them and the thousands of others who do not achieve wealth, fame, or even a decent living from the ring."

"Boxing, as a throwback to uncivilized man, should not be sanctioned by any civilized society," Lundberg said.

Gilbert takes 3-stroke lead

Gibby Gilbert closes his birthday round with birdie

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gibby Gilbert celebrated his 42nd birthday Friday by blowing out the candles on the rest of the field, firing a 5-under-par 66 and vaulting into a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the $300,000 Los Angeles Open.

Also on the leader board in what Gilbert called "oldtimers' week" was 53-year-old Arnold Palmer, who shot a 69 to go with his opening-round 66 and was at 135, four strokes behind the leader.

Gilbert, a 15-year tour veteran, hasn't won a tournament since 1976. He finished 103rd on the money list last year. But he never played better than he did Thursday and Friday with his rounds of 65 and 66 for an 11-under-par total of 131.

"I'm probably more surprised than anyone," Gilbert said. "That's probably the two best rounds I've put together in my life. I never shot a 131 before."

In addition to playing brilliant golf over the par-71, 6,655-yard Rancho Park Golf Course, Gilbert also had some exceptional luck, typified on the ninth hole when a 3-wood shot went off line into the gallery. But it struck a spectator on the kneecap (he was not injured) and bounced onto the green and Gilbert then two-putted for a birdie.

"It hit him right on the kneecap," Gilbert said. "But it ended up 35 feet from the pin. I guess I didn't hit him hard enough.

"You'd have to say things are going right for me."

Gilbert began the day at 6-under, one stroke behind leader Fuzzy Zoeller, who shot a 1-under 70 Friday and was alone in second place at 134.

Gilbert, a native of Chattanooga, Tenn., birdied the seventh, eighth and ninth holes to move to 9-under and then carded birdies on the 13th, 15th and 18th holes following a bogey on No. 10 for his 66.

His final birdie came on a 35-foot putt when the ball hit the lip, bounced into the air and returned to earth in the center of the cup.

Also enjoying the spotlight, not to mention the sunny skies and 80-degree temperature, was Palmer, a three-time LA Open winner who is turning in his best performance on the tour in several years.

Palmer began the day at 5-under and bogeyed the first hole. But he carded an eagle-3 at No. 8 to move to 6-under and birdied Nos. 13 and 15 — the last with a twisting 25-foot putt — before struggling to a bogey on the 17th hole for his 69.

"I putted for birdies, reasonable birdies, on the first six holes and didn't make any of them," Palmer said. "It really could have been a good round, but it turned out to be a decent round."

"I don't ever want to be in the back of anything," he said. Sure I'm in good position right now, but I could think of a lot better position to be in, and that's to have a lower score. It's that simple."

De Agostini claims second downhill of season

SCHRUNS, Austria (UPI) — Doris de Agostini of Switzerland fought off a powerful French challenge Friday to mark her second world cup downhill victory in three races this season.

The 24-year-old downhill specialist hurtled down the 2,100 meter track, which drops 540 meters, in 1 minute 24.57 seconds, only 12 hundredths of a second ahead of Elisabeth Chaud of France, who was second in 1:24.69.

Caroline Attia of France, winner of the last world cup downhill race at San Sicario, Italy, last month, was third in 1:24.89.

Agostini, who had won the season's opening world cup downhill race at val d'Isere, France, on Dec. 8, said, "I knew I could not afford the slightest mistake on this track if I wanted to win. The most crucial part came in the last sharp bend before the final schuss where I succeeded in finding the fastest line down."

The tall, slim Swiss girl, using her long legs like shock absorbers, was slightly behind her toughest rival Attia at the intermediate stage, but then displayed her stamina and strength in the lower part of the course where she gained valuable hundredths of a second by handling the sharp bends with precision.

Agostini, who won her first world cup downhill race at the age of 18 in 1976 at Badgastein, Austria, said she was glad she did not go through with retirement last winter.

"I am glad I'm continuing, although I must say its very hard to stay on top," she said. "You have to work extremely hard unless you risk disappearing from the top class."

Agostini, who has won seven world cup downhill races since she started her career in 1976, also won on the same track two years ago.

"Of course it helps if you know the track," she says. "I must also admit that the course was softer than in training and thus slightly easier to handle."

The race, held instead of the world cup downhill race that had to be canceled at Pfronten, West Germany earlier this month, was staged in sunny weather after a slight snowfall overnight.

American downhiller Cindy Nelson, who was very strong in training, buried her chances when she fell on the upper part shortly after the start.

"I got slightly off the track in the upper part after hitting a bump," she said. "The tip of my left ski hit the new snow that was covering the edge of the track and I lost balance. perhaps I was trying too hard."

The three-day event will continue through Sunday.

Brett doesn't get lifetime pact

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) -- All-Star third baseman George Brett of the Kansas City Royals will report to spring training as scheduled but without the lifetime contract extension that he had been seeking.

Brett and his agent-brother Bobby met with Royals' owner Ewing Kauffman, President Joe Burke and General Manager John Schuerholz for an hour Friday to quell the bitterness between the two sides stemming from the third baseman's request for an extension.

"Their answer was a flat 'No,'" George Brett said. "There will be no adjustment in my contract. It hurts a little bit. It was a situation of you didn't get what you wanted. But I'll be there at spring training on March 1. I want to go out and have a couple of good years and then maybe the Royals will extend my contract."

Brett, 29, signed a five-year contract extension prior to the 1980 season at a reported $1 million per season that would keep him in a Kansas City uniform through 1986.

Skidmore grabs PBA lead

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) -- Gary Skidmore, who had his best year on the professional tour last year, Friday jumped from ninth place into a 2-pin lead after five rounds of the $135,000 Professional Bowler's Tour Classic.

Skidmore, a 28-year-old righthander from Albuquerque, N.M., won six of eight match play games to edge ahead of Steve Cook, Roseville, Calif., 7,850 to 7,848 pins after 34 games.

The field of 24 bowlers are shooting for a top prize of $23,000 in the PBA's first stop of 1983. The top five finishers will battle for the title this afternoon on network television (ABC).

Martin denies cocaine talk

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys defensive end Harvey Martin, accused of using cocaine with a confessed drug dealer, has termed the allegation a lie aimed at discrediting him.

The accusation came in testimony Thursday from Danny Stone, 27, a former barber in the wealthy suburb of Highland Park, who has turned government witness in the case against four other accused cocaine dealers.

Stone, who has pleaded guilty to one count of conspiring to participate in a cocaine ring, said he and Martin "were in on some deals together, where he would come over and we'd do some (cocaine) and he would pay for his part."

Martin, who has acknowledged in the past that he knew Stone, said, "It's all a lie. I never thought he would lie about me like that."

Martin, whose team plays Sunday in an NFC semifinal playoff against Green Bay, said, "Since Danny Stone is going to the penitentiary, he really didn't mind perjuring himself. For him to really lie on me like that. I think he would have to think he had nothing to lose, so why not perjure himself."

Cubs feel they may get Cey

CHICAGO (UPI) -- The Chicago Cubs are actively courting Los Angeles third baseman Ron Cey, and General Manager Dallas Green indicated Friday he was optimistic he could swing a deal to bring the veteran to Chicago.

Green said he has had numerous discussions with Dodgers' General Manager Al Campanis about acquiring Cey to help fill the Cubs' third base hole. However, he said the two clubs haven't been able to agree on proper compensation for Cey.

The Dodgers asked Green to include Chicago's top reliever, Lee Smith, as part of the deal.

"When they asked for Lee Smith, I hung up the phone," Green said. "He can't be included in that deal."

Pioneer Bowl site switched

SAN DIEGO (UPI) -- The NCAA Division I-AA football committee voted Thursday night to hold the 1983 Pioneer Bowl football game Dec. 17 at The Citadel's 22,500-seat Johnson Hagood Stadium in Charleston, S.C.

The announcement was made by Dr. Milton Hunter, who said the deal calls for a 2-year contract between Charleston officials and Pioneer Bowl officials.

The committee had also considered Lake Charles, La. and Wichita Falls, Texas, as sites for the game. Wichita Falls hosted the Division I-AA championship game the past two years.

Judge rules against Stemrick

HOUSTON (UPI) — A judge Friday ruled there was probable cause for a cocaine-possession charge against Greg Stemrick, the Houston Oilers cornerback arrested with 2 ½ grams of the illegal drug.

Stemrick, 31, dressed neatly in a sweater and slacks, appeared stunned and shy as television cameras filmed his entrance and exit from a courtroom. Defense lawyer Bill Portis said Stemrick "sort of feels like he's a criminal. He's taking it hard."

Stemrick made no comment to reporters after his first appearance in court.
